GOMPERS DIES IN SAN ANTONIO

VETERAN LABOR CHIEF SUFFERS RELAPSE AS HE FIGHTS ON HOME SOIL

Official Announcement of Death Made by Press Representative of American Federation of Labor, Which Once Immigrant Boy Helped Organize and Which he Led as President for 37 Years.

FUTILE STRUGGLE IS MADE AGAINST PNEUMONIA DEVELOPED IN MEXICO

"If I Must Die I Want to Die at Home," he Told Physicians Who Counselled Against His Decision to Make Emergency Trip From Mexico City to United States—Spirit Cheerful as he Realized End Was Near.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Dec. 13.—Samuel Gompers is dead.

The veteran labor leader, victor in his determination to make his last fight on the soil of his homeland suffered a relapse early today and died at 4:05 a. m.

Official announcement of his death was made by Chester I. Wright, press representative of the American Federation of Labor, which Gompers helped organize and which he led as president for 37 years.

But a few hours before the relapse which brought his life to a close just this side of the milepost, marking three quarters of a century, the physicians attending him had issued a bulletin with a note of optimism, hoping that he might spend a comfortable night, although his condition then was regarded as grave.

The first intimation that death was imminent came at 2 a. m. when members of the Gompers party were awakened and the physicians were called in hurried consultation. His breathing then was labored and painful and his vitality low from the struggle against the bronchial and pneumonic condition which had necessitated the emergency trip from Mexico City.

Calls For His Wife.

At 4 o'clock William Mahon of Detroit, an official of the Federation came from Gompers' room with tears streaming down his face.

"He can't last long. It's artificial life," he whispered to another official.

Gompers knew he was near death. He faced the dark prospect with the same spirit he showed when he answered the physicians who counselled against the return to the United States and were told:

"If I must die I want to die at home."

Fully conscious, Gompers reached for Morrison's hand, and between labored breaths told him"

"Frank, I'm dying. Please send for my wife."

Death came a few moments later.

His Parting Message.

According to Dr. Lee Rice, San Antonio specialist, Gompers heart action became weaker, failing to respond to final emergency treatment. Three physicians, doctors Rice, Hansen and Russ, who took over the case Friday night from Dr. W. F. Cockrell, City of Mexico physicians, who made the trip north, were at the bedside during the night.

The last official bulletin issued was

CONTEST LOOMS FOR SUCCESSOR

Executive Council Will Name Man for Gompers' Place.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—One of the stiffest, and perhaps the bitterest, international fights in history faced the American Federation of Labor today in selecting a successor to Samuel Gompers.

Under the constitution of the Federation, Frank Morrison, Secretary, automatically succeeded to the presidency, but he must call a meeting of the executive council within six days to select a successor, who shall serve until the next convention, to be held in Atlantic City, next fall.

The council must meet as soon as possible after Morrison's call.

Weathered Many Storms

Gompers had been president of the American Federation almost continuously since its foundation. Only once was he not returned and that was for but one term. Of late years his power was so great on serious attempts were made to oust him.

The last fight on him for the presidency was at the Denver convention of the Federation for years ago. Then, fusion of the United Mine Workers with a handful of affiliated bodies put up John R. Lewis, miners'

Widows and Fatherless Children in Need of Bed Clothing.

The Review-Tribune fund for the relief of the six members of the household of Mrs. Matilda Welling, 1731 Globe street, East End—two widows and four fatherless children, reached the $126 mark today.

Indications were the total would go beyond $200 before night, for employes of the No. 5 plant of the Homer Laughlin China company at Newell were seeking contributions during the forenoon. They said their efforts would result in raising at least $85.

Friends of the Welling family said that neighbors and organizations were sending groceries, coal, etc., to the home. They said the family is in need of bed clothing, while the children should have underwear.

Lewis and Fellow Officers Re-elected By Union Miners

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 13.—John L. Lewis has been re-elected president of the United Mine Workers of America, together with the entire administration ticket, by overwhelming pluralities, it was announced here today as the official canvass of the vote in the recent election began.

Unofficial returns showed that Lewis, John Philip Murray, vice president, and William Green, secretary-treasurer, had won by impressive totals. The opposition candidates, who were not widely known, received little support, it was indicated, outside of their own districts.

The election is held biennially.

Trotzky Goes To Health Resort.

MOSCOW, Dec. 13.—Leon Trotzky, soviet commissar for war, has departed for the south, the public health commissar announced today. Trotzky has been suffering from an aggravated case of la grippe and seeks rest, the health commissar said.

FOURTH FRIDAY NIGHT ROBBERY NETS $30; STAGE ROOMS VISITED

MONEY IN BOX

Police Believe Gang Responsible for Three Other Jobs.

Office and dressing rooms of the Strand theatre, St. Clair avenue, were looted early Saturday morning, about $30 being stolen.

The burglars gained entrance by forcing open a stage door leading from the rear of the playhouse into Green lane. The door and frame was badly battered, indicating that a heavy iron bar had been used.

Go To Balcony Floor.

The robbers then turned their attention to the private office on the balcony floor. They "jimmied" the office door, searched the desk and then pried open the door of a closet. In a small metal box in the closet they found $30 in change.

The robbery was discovered by employes when they reported at the playhouse this morning. John Peters, manager of the theatre, immediately notified Chief of Police McDermott, who made an investigation.

Four Jobs Attributed To Gang.

Police believe the robbery to have been committed by the gang that in the last two months looted the offices of the Ceramic theatre and Woodbine Laundry, Fourth street, and the Metsch Refractories company, Third street, Newell, where safes were battered open. It is significant that the four robberies were committed on Friday night. Police attribute this to the fact that the burglars believe the Saturday pay rolls to have been made up on Friday and left in the office over night ready for Saturday.

Police had made no arrests in connection with the robbery up to an early hour this afternoon.

Last Showing Here of "Ten Commandments" At Ceramic Theatre

The three-day engagement of "The Ten Commandments," De Mille's de luxe photoplay, which is said by critics to be the most stupendous production in the history of the American screen, will clost at the Ceramic theatre at 8:15 o'clock tonight. All seats are reserved.

Large crowds witnessed the presentation Thursday evening, Friday afternoon and evening and this afternoon.

Pioneer Advocate of Rights of Organized Labor, Editor of Federationist and Author.

Samuel Gompers was born in England January 27, 1850. He was a cigar maker by trade and a pioneer advocate of the rights of organized labor, becoming interested in the trades union idea when he was but fourteen. He was one of the founders of the American Federation of Labor in 1886 and served continuously as its president except for one term, that in 1895. He helped develop the Cigar Makers' International Union in 1887 and served continuously as an officer of that organization. He was editor of the American Federationist and author of several pamphlets on labor questions and the trades union movement. His unceasing activity as a labor champion brought him national and international repute. He was a member of the advisory committee of the Council of National Defense in the war years and representative of the American Federation of Labor at the peace conference in Paris in 1918 and at the peace congress he was elected president of the international commission on labor legislation.

He also served on several national industrial commissions during the administration of President Wilson, President Harding and President Coolidge.

GOMPERS DIES IN SAN ANTONIO

Official Announcement of Death Made by Press Representative of American Federation of Labor, Which Once Immigrant Boy Helped Organize and Which he Led as President for 37 Years.

FUTILE STRUGGLE IS MADE AGAINST PNEUMONIA DEVELOPED IN MEXICO

"If I Must Die I Want to Die at Home," he Told Physicians Who Counselled Against His Decision to Make Emergency Trip From Mexico City to United States—Spirit Cheerful as he Realized End Was Near.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Dec. 13.—Samuel Gompers is dead.

The veteran labor leader, victor in his determination to make his last fight on the soil of his homeland suffered a relapse early today and died at 4:05 a. m.

Official announcement of his death was made by Chester I. Wright, press representative of the American Federation of Labor, which Gompers helped organize and which he led as president for 37 years.

But a few hours before the relapse which brought his life to a close just this side of the milepost, marking three quarters of a century, the physicians attending him had issued a bulletin with a note of optimism, hoping that he might spend a comfortable night, although his condition then was regarded as grave.

The first intimation that death was imminent came at 2 a. m. when members of the Gompers party were awakened and the physicians were called in hurried consultation. His breathing then was labored and painful and his vitality low from the struggle against the bronchial and pneumonic condition which had necessitated the emergency trip from Mexico City.

Calls For His Wife.

At 4 o'clock William Mahon of Detroit, an official of the Federation came from Gompers' room with tears streaming down his face.

"He can't last long. It's artificial life," he whispered to another official.

Gompers knew he was near death. He faced the dark prospect with the same spirit he showed when he answered the physicians who counselled against the return to the United States and were told:

"If I must die I want to die at home."

Fully conscious, Gompers reached for Morrison's hand, and between labored breaths told him"

"Frank, I'm dying. Please send for my wife."

His Parting Message.

According to Dr. Lee Rice, San Antonio specialist, Gompers heart action became weaker, failing to respond to final emergency treatment. Three physicians, doctors Rice, Hansen and Russ, who took over the case Friday night from Dr. W. F. Cockrell, City of Mexico physicians, who made the trip north, were at the bedside during the night.

The last official bulletin issued was

Executive Council Will Name Man for Gompers' Place.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—One of the stiffest, and perhaps the bitterest, international fights in history faced the American Federation of Labor today in selecting a successor to Samuel Gompers.

Under the constitution of the Federation, Frank Morrison, Secretary, automatically succeeded to the presidency, but he must call a meeting of the executive council within six days to select a successor, who shall serve until the next convention, to be held in Atlantic City, next fall.

The council must meet as soon as possible after Morrison's call.

Weathered Many Storms

Gompers had been president of the American Federation almost continuously since its foundation. Only once was he not returned and that was for but one term. Of late years his power was so great on serious attempts were made to oust him.

The last fight on him for the presidency was at the Denver convention of the Federation for years ago. Then, fusion of the United Mine Workers with a handful of affiliated bodies put up John R. Lewis, miners'

RELIEF FUND FOR WELLING FAMILY OF SIX REACHES $126

POTTERS AIDING

Widows and Fatherless Children in Need of Bed Clothing.

The Review-Tribune fund for the relief of the six members of the household of Mrs. Matilda Welling, 1731 Globe street, East End—two widows and four fatherless children, reached the $126 mark today.

Indications were the total would go beyond $200 before night, for employes of the No. 5 plant of the Homer Laughlin China company at Newell were seeking contributions during the forenoon. They said their efforts would result in raising at least $85.

Friends of the Welling family said that neighbors and organizations were sending groceries, coal, etc., to the home. They said the family is in need of bed clothing, while the children should have underwear.

10 a. m. Report.

Efforts are being made to raise enough money to liquidate a $600 mortgage on the home.

Lewis and Fellow Officers Re-elected By Union Miners

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 13.—John L. Lewis has been re-elected president of the United Mine Workers of America, together with the entire administration ticket, by overwhelming pluralities, it was announced here today as the official canvass of the vote in the recent election began.

Unofficial returns showed that Lewis, John Philip Murray, vice president, and William Green, secretary-treasurer, had won by impressive totals. The opposition candidates, who were not widely known, received little support, it was indicated, outside of their own districts.

The election is held biennially.

Trotzky Goes To Health Resort.

MOSCOW, Dec. 13.—Leon Trotzky, soviet commissar for war, has departed for the south, the public health commissar announced today. Trotzky has been suffering from an aggravated case of la grippe and seeks rest, the health commissar said.

FOURTH FRIDAY NIGHT ROBBERY NETS $30; STAGE ROOMS VISITED

MONEY IN BOX

Police Believe Gang Responsible for Three Other Jobs.

Office and dressing rooms of the Strand theatre, St. Clair avenue, were looted early Saturday morning, about $30 being stolen.

The burglars gained entrance by forcing open a stage door leading from the rear of the playhouse into Green lane. The door and frame was badly battered, indicating that a heavy iron bar had been used.

Go To Balcony Floor.

The robbers then turned their attention to the private office on the balcony floor. They "jimmed" the office door, searched the desk and then pried open the door of a closet. In a small metal box in the closet they found $30 in change.

The robbery was discovered by employes when they reported at the playhouse this morning. John Peters, manager of the theatre, immediately notified Chief of Police McDermott, who made an investigation.

Four Jobs Attributed To Gang.

Police believe the robbery to have been committed by the gang that in the last two months looted the offices of the Ceramic theatre and Woodbine Laundry, Fourth street, and the Metsch Refractories company, Third street, Newell, where safes were battered open. It is significant that the four robberies were committed on Friday night. Police attribute this to the fact that the burglars believe the Saturday pay rolls to have been made up on Friday and left in the office over night ready for Saturday.

Police had made no arrests in connection with the robbery up to an early hour this afternoon.

Last Showing Here of "Ten Commandments" At Ceramic Theatre

The three-day engagement of "The Ten Commandments," De Mille's de luxe photoplay, which is said by critics to be the most stupendous production in the history of the American screen, will clost at the Ceramic theatre at 8:15 o'clock tonight. All seats are reserved.

Large crowds witnessed the presentation Thursday evening, Friday afternoon and evening and this afternoon.

This is the only time the remarkable photoplay will be presented here, for it is a road attraction carrying an augmented orchestra.

SAMUEL GOMPERS BORN IN ENGLAND; HE WAS CIGAR MAKER BY TRADE

Pioneer Advocate of Rights of Organized Labor, Editor of Federationist and Author.

Samuel Gompers was born in England January 27, 1850. He was a cigar maker by trade and a pioneer advocate of the rights of organized labor, becoming interested in the trades union idea when he was but fourteen. He was one of the founders of the American Federation of Labor in 1886 and served continuously as its president except for one term, that in 1895. He helped develop the Cigar Makers' International Union in 1887 and served continuously as an officer of that organization. He was editor of the American Federationist and author of several pamphlets on labor questions and the trades union movement. His unceasing activity as a labor champion brought him national and international repute. He was a member of the advisory committee of the Council of National Defense in the war years and representative of the American Federation of Labor at the peace conference in Paris in 1918 and at the peace congress he was elected president of the international commission on labor legislation.

He also served on several national industrial commissions during the administration of President Wilson, President Harding and President Coolidge.

MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION PLANS OPEN MEETING MONDAY EVENING

Dr. D. W. McLeod Will Discuss "Virgin Birth" at Initial Session in First Church of Christ.

First of a series of semi-monthly open meetings under auspices of the East Liverpool Ministerial Association will be held in the First Church of Christ, at 7:30 o'clock Monday evening.

These meetings will be featured by discussion of literary and theological subjects. Dr. Donald W. MacLeod will be the speaker at the initial meeting, his subject being "The Virgin Birth."

James A. Blythe, New York city, a representative of the Near East Relief Fund association, will appear before the ministers, asking that local churches designate a Sunday in January as Near East Relief Sunday, when funds for war sufferers in the Near East countries will be solicited.

Subjects and speakers for future meetings during the winter and spring months are:

"The Inspiration of the Bible," Rev. F. A. Dean.

WOUNDED MAN AWARDED $187

John Graul, Shot by Howard Fox, Gets State Compensation.

John Graul, Bloomfield, claymaker at the Colonial pottery, who was shot by Howard Fox, a fellow employe, last April, has been awarded compensation to the amount of $187.50 by the state compensation department, it was announced today.

Graul's first application was refused by the department officials who were under the impression that the wounded man had not been hurt in the course of his employment. A further investigation of the case was made, however, which resulted in the claim being allowed.

Fox, who had been claymaker at the pottery had been discharged, and Graul, who had been working as a helper at the plant was given his place. Fox, it is alleged, returned to the plant on the day of the shooting and was ordered away. He returned a second time and was again ordered out. About 2:30 o'clock, the same afternoon he is said to have returned for the third time, armed with a revolver.

Without a word of warning, he is said to have opened fire on Graul. Thef irst shot went wild, but the second struck him in the right arm. Fox, thinking that Graul had been killed, ran from the plant and committed suicide.

Graul was taken to the hospital where he was confined for about two weeks as the result of his injuries. In his claim for compensation, he said he was unable to work for several weeks as a result of the wound inflicted while in line of his employment.

Boys' Tournament At Y. M. C. A. Opens With Two Events

The athletic tournaments for members of the boys' groups of the Y. M. C. A. opened in the "Y" gymnasium today. The running high jump was the event for the elementaries, while the juniors engaged in a 60-yard potato race.

Winners in the jumping contest were: First, Paul O'Brien, Tigers; second, John Craig, Bears; third, Lawrence Lunsford, Bears; fourth, Virgil Wycoff, Bears; fifth, Walter Hanes, Bears. The Tigers scored 51 points as compared to 36 credited to the Bears.

Several exciting heats were run off before the winners were determined in the potato race. Allen Todd, of the Navy team, took first place; Donald Tatgenhorst, Army, was second; Donald Mylar, Navy, third; Harold Bailey, Army, fourth, and Alfred Earl, Army, fifth. The score was: Navy, 76; Army, 59.

The next events will be staged Saturday morning, Dec. 20.

Y. M. C. A. Shop Meets To be Discontinued During Holidays

Industrial shop meetings under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. which have been in progress in 18 plants of the local district will be discontinued this week until after the first of the year. Most plants will suspend operations during the latter part of next week until after New Year's day.

The meetings will be resumed on Monday, Jan. 5. The Y. M. C. A. officials have arranged a dinner for January 15 to which all persons interested in shop meetings will be invited.

W. S. Foulks, East Liverpool, was named chairman of a proposed child welfare committee.

The next meeting will be held in Salem early in the new year.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—Under the leadership of the rails and motors, stocks jumped into higher price levels today in continuation of the rally which was in progress at the close of Friday's session. The best records in the former group were made by the "Van Swearingen" railroad shares, reflecting the confidence of the speculative district in the ultimate consummation of the gigantic merger which will link up the Nickle Plate, Pere Merquette, Erie, Chesapeake and Ohio and Hocking Valley lines. Motor and copper stocks were in good demand at higher prices and even the oil stocks threw off some of the depression which has been holding them down in recent weeks.

Additional evidence of commercial and industrial expansion was presented by the week end reviews of the reliable mercantile and economic agencies, with important gains reaching almost every department of the country's business activity. The best accomplishments were in the steel trade but the outlook in the agriculture, textile and other important industries was presented in very favorable light. Money conditions at the week-end were also favorable.

Gompers Dies

at 10 o'clock last night and gave Gomper's condition practically unchanged and extremely grave.

"Nurse, this is a bad end—God bless our American institutions. May they grow better", was the parting message of the dying chief to his subordinates, grouped about his bed, bowed in grief.

Two nurses, Miss M. H. May of New York, and Miss Marie Johnston of San Antonio were in the room.

Stern Men Show Grief.

Official announcement of Gompers death came from Chester I. Wright, press representative of the American Federation of Labor five minutes after the veteran had passed away.

Wright in announcing the death simply said:

"The chief has gone."

Stern, purposeful men with gray hair in wrinkled business suits, cried unabashed. The men—who had followed the direction of the dead leader in the interests of Labor—spoke hardly a word.

Women of the party sobbed, shortly after the death was announced, telegrams were dispatched to General P. Calles, president of Mexico, whose inauguration Gompers was attending when stricken. Messages were sent to all members of the executive board of the Federation who are not here and to Mrs. Gompers at Washington.

Union Man Drives Ambulance.

At 5 o'clock members of the executive staff met in the rooms of Frank Morrison, secretary, who announced that an official statement would be made following the conference.

Funeral arrangements are being held up pending advices from the widow. It was the irony of fate that the things which counted most in the labor chief's life should figure with death so closely at hand. His arrival at the international Great Northern station was occasioned by a labor dispute, something which had become common place to him. This time he lay pale and helpless, too ill to decide, but his assistants decided quickly for him.

Two ambulances were at the train to meet him on account of a conflict in orders. One was owned by a firm whose head is a director of the local open shop association. The other was driven by a union chauffeur and it carried Mr. Gompers to the place of his death.

Pan-American Labor Leader.

Gompers went to Mexico City with a delegation of representatives of the American Federation of Labor, following his re-election as president at the Federation convention in El Paso, Texas. He attended the inauguration of President Calles of Mexico and insisted upon attending a bull fight afterwards, though he was experiencing trouble with his breathing in the rarified altitude of the Mexican capital and was so weak he had to be supported by friends as he left the Arena.

He lay ill for three days in his hotel room before the homeward trip was undertaken. During this time, he was re-elected president of the Pan-American Labor Unions.

Gompers' personal physicians counselled against his making the trip by train, advising that he wait until arrangements could be made for an airplane trip to the United States and the lower altitude which it was hoped would relieve his condition.

But he insisted and was carried on a stretcher aboard the Laredo express Wednesday night. After reaching the lower altitude nearing the American border he gained in strength and his attendants were hopeful of his recovery when he was brought to San Antonio and taken to a hotel yesterday afternoon.

It had been hoped that after a few days rest he could continue the trip to his home in New York.

Leaves Widow and Son.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—The death of Samuel Gompers, Labor's greatest leader, caused sincere regret today in Washington, where for two score years he has wielded an influence seldom possessed by a private citizen.

As president of the American Federation of Labor since 1882. Gompers has seen administrations come and go, but he had managed always to steadily increase the power and prestige of organized labor, at the same time adding to his personal influence and his wealth of friendships, not only within the membership of his own vast organization, but among officials of the government and in the other groups with which he was associated.

Gompers is survived by a widow and one son, Samuel Gompers Jr., who is chief clerk of the department of Labor. He was twice married. His first wife died some years ago.

Many tributes to the personal achievements of Gompers came today from government officials, senators and congressmen with whom he was associated in his work in behalf of the American labor movement.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Samuel Gompers may be buried in Sleepy Hollow cemetery, Tarrytown, N. Y., it was learned at the American Federation of Labor headquarters here today.

Some time ago, Gompers, of Dutch descent purchased a plot in Sleepy Hollow. When word of Gompers' death reached the Federation headquarters here, the Federation building was shrouded in black.

Morrison's Statement.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Dec. 13.—Following a meeting of the members of the executive council, Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, today issued a statement on the death of Samuel Gompers, president of the Federation. It follows:

"President Gompers died at 4:05 o'clock this morning despite heroic efforts to save his life. Dr. Lee Rice and Dr. W. S. Hanson of San Antonio, were in attendance. Dr. Rice stated that Mr. Gompers' heart failed to respond to restoratives. There had been an acute condition of the heart and kidneys for fully a year and a half past. It was impossible to overcome the weakness of the heart. Every possible measure was taken to prolong Mr. Gompers' life, but to no avail.

"At 2:30 this morning he uttered his last words: 'Nurse, this is the end,' he said. 'God bless our American institutions. May they grow better day by day.'

Last Slumber Peaceful

"From that time until the end Mr. Gompers was unconscious. His breathing was heavy until just a few moments before the end. As death approached, his face became calm and he sank peacefully into his slumber.

"In accordance with a wish expressed in Mexico City when he believed the end to be near, vice-president James Duncan held Mr. Gompers' hand as he passed away.

"Members of the executive council still present in San Antonio are discussing arrangements for the funeral and an announcement in that respect will be made later.

Co-Workers At Bedside.

"Mr. Gompers, during his last moments, was surrounded by a group, the members of which have for years been his intimate associates and co-workers. They were: Dr. Lee K. Rice, W. S. Hanson, of San Antonio; Frank Morrison, Secretary of the American Federation of Labor; vice-Presidents James Duncan, Matthew Woll and Martin F. Ryan; W. D. Mahon, President of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electrical Railway Employes; John P. Frey, editor of the Molders Journal and President of the Ohio State Federation of Labor; Clarence C. Thorne, member of the American Federation of Labor research staff; William C. Roberts, chairman of the American Federation of Labor Legislative committee; Chester Wright, Director of A. F. of L. Information and Publicity; J. R. Giles and E. J. Tracy, members of the A. F. of L. T. J. McQuaid, Plate Printers' Union, Washington; C. N. Idar, A. F. of L. organizer in San Antonio; Joseph L. Lynch, member of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes, and A. L. Bytol, United States Immigration officer.

"The two nurses present were Miss M. H. May, R. N., of New York, and Miss Marie Jameton, R. N., of San Antonio."

Trace False Report.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Dec. 13.—The report that Samuel Gompers died early while his train was passing through the state of San Luis Potasi in Mexico, was telephoned back to Mexico City by a railroad employe in the town of San Nicolas, according to members of the Gompers party. After the report had been sent, the train carrying the aged labor leader left San Nicolas and it was late in the afternoon before communication could be established.

BODY WILL GO TO WASHINGTON

SAN ANTONIO, Dec. 13.—The body of Samuel Gompers, veteran president of the American Federation of Labor, who died this morning, will be taken to Washington some time tonight.

This was decided upon by Frank Morrison, secretary of the Federation, following receipt of a telegram from the capital.

Contest Looms

president. The effort was a failure. Since that time, no one arose to challenge Gompers' leadership.

Several reasons have been assigned why Gompers, despite his failing health of late, successfully rode the numerous gathering storms that have arisen at recent conventions to remove him. First and foremost is that the older members of the federation felt that because of Gompers' long and faithful service he should be allowed to retain the helm until death, even though he might have become so incapacitated physically that he could no longer do active work.

This certainty was the cause that no fight was made on the veteran leader at the recent El Paso convention. There was at El Paso a strong minority that felt a younger and stronger man should be given the post. The proposal even was advanced that Gompers should be made either president emeritus, or a new post of assistant to the president should be created in order to relieve Gompers of much of the routine of the office. This never reached the convention floor because the older members intervened and pleaded that nothing be done to embarrass the "chief," as affectionately he was known to associates.

Woods Full of Candidates

With Gompers death the barriers are now all down. Literally the woods are full of candidates to succeed him.

Every member of the executive council, every president of an international union, admittedly, is in the field. Each will command strong support, a strength that may be difficult to divide or unite with other forces in determining upon two, or even three candidates. The result, therefore, may lead to the most bitter of clashes.

In the executive council itself, the fight may prove less acrimonious than was the contest immediately to come before the convention of the federation. These members are of the so-called "Gompers machine," or administration. They held office because Gompers wished them to, and they kept office largely because they agreed with him on important questions.

No one man in the council was closer to Gompers than Matthew Woll, a vice president, and chief of the photo-engravers union. For the last two years, at least, Woll was regarded everywhere in federation circles as "spokesman for the chief." It was to Woll, rather than Gomeprs, that persons having business with the Federation were referred. Statements from the federation usually came out under Woll's signature and were accepted as if Gompers' name had been signed to them.

But being so close to Gompers, Woll unquestionably will begin with a certain handicap. The men who opposed Gompers policies may unite against him. Woll is inextricably linked by the membership to all that Gompers stood for. But in the council, composed of Gompers men, Woll appears to have the lead for selection ad interim. It is not believed that the council will go outside of its own membership to select a new chief.

Others Have Followings.

Frank Morrison, veteran secretary, also has a strong following, as have Daniel Tobin, treasurer; William Green, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers, and George Berry, president of the Printing Pressmen, loom as a candidates with a great potential following. This is particularly true of Lewis, who might well be termed the candidate of the "younger members," that is, those who opposed the administration and policies of Gompers.

But even Lewis faces certain handicaps, first, he was beaten once by the Gompers administration. Again, well defined rumors have it that Lewis may get the labor post in the Coolidge cabinet after March 4. The federation almost unanmiously would like to see him ascend to that portfolio. Should Lewis be elected and then enter the cabinet, the presidency fight would have to be renewed all over again, for most certainly it is not believed that he would retin both positions.

No Guess on Successor.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Dec. 13.—Shortly after 9 o'clock this morning, Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, said that it was impossible to tell, even to the slightest degree, how Gompers' death would affect the Federation and its members.

"It is impossible at this time, to even hazard a guess as to who will be the next president of the Federation," said Morrison. "I do not know now whether the man selected to succeed Gompers will be permanent or not. In the event some one is selected soon, it is possible that he will be replaced following our convention in the spring.

"It is possible that a second conference to be held by the executive council here today will include this information."

WOUNDED MAN AWARDED $187

John Graul, Shot by Howard Fox, Gets State Compensation.

John Graul, Bloomfield, claymaker at the Colonial pottery, who was shot by Howard Fox, a fellow employe, last April, has been awarded compensation to the amount of $187.50 by the state compensation department, it was announced today.

Graul's first application was refused by the department officials who were under the impression that the wounded man had not been hurt in the course of his employment. A further investigation of the case was made, however, which resulted in the claim being allowed.

Fox, who had been claymaker at the pottery had been discharged, and Graul, who had been working as a helper at the plant was given his place. Fox, it is alleged, returned to the plant on the day of the shooting and was ordered away. He returned a second time and was again ordered out. About 2:30 o'clock, the same afternoon he is said to have returned for the third time, armed with a revolver.

Without a word of warning, he is said to have opened fire on Graul. Thef irst shot went wild, but the second struck him in the right arm. Fox, thinking that Graul had been killed, ran from the plant and committed suicide.

Graul was taken to the hospital where he was confined for about two weeks as the result of his injuries. In his claim for compensation, he said he was unable to work for several weeks as a result of the wound inflicted while in line of his employment.

Boys' Tournament At Y. M. C. A. Opens With Two Events

The athletic tournaments for members of the boys' groups of the Y. M. C. A. opened in the "Y" gymnasium today. The running high jump was the event for the elementaries, while the juniors engaged in a 60-yard potato race.

Winners in the jumping contest were: First, Paul O'Brien, Tigers; second, John Craig, Bears; third, Lawrence Lunsford, Bears; fourth, Virgil Wycoff, Bears; fifth, Walter Hanes, Bears. The Tigers scored 51 points as compared to 36 credited to the Bears.

Several exciting heats were run off before the winners were determined in the potato race. Allen Todd, of the Navy team, took first place; Donald Tatgenhorst, Army, was second; Donald Mylar, Navy, third; Harold Bailey, Army, fourth, and Alfred Earl, Army, fifth. The score was: Navy, 76; Army, 59.

The next events will be staged Saturday morning, Dec. 20.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—Under the leadership of the rails and motors, stocks jumped into higher price levels today in continuation of the rally which was in progress at the close of Friday's session. The best records in the former group were made by the "Van Swearingen" railroad shares, reflecting the confidence of the speculative district in the ultimate consummation of the gigantic merger which will link up the Nickle Plate, Pere Merquette, Erie, Chesapeake and Ohio and Hocking Valley lines. Motor and copper stocks were in good demand at higher prices and even the oil stocks threw off some of the depression which has been holding them down in recent weeks.

Additional evidence of commercial and industrial expansion was presented by the week end reviews of the reliable mercantile and economic agencies, with important gains reaching almost every department of the country's business activity. The best accomplishments were in the steel trade but the outlook in the agriculture, textile and other important industries was presented in very favorable light. Money conditions at the week-end were also favorable.

DEATH ROLL

Mrs. John Perdune.

Mrs. John Perdune, 63 years old, died yesterday at her home back of Newell. Death followed a brief illness.

She leaves her husband and four children: Anna, Tillie and Charles, at home, and Mrs. Saul McCoy, East Liverpool.

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Saul McCoy, Fairview street. Rev. D. W. MacLeod, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, will officiate.

Burial will be made in Spring Grove cemetery.

Helt Funeral.

Funeral services for Mrs. Arthur Helt, former resident, were held Thursday afternoon at Rush Run Church. Rev. Stewart, pastor of the Rayland Presbyterian church, officiated.

Burial was made in Hopewell cemetery.

Mrs. Lida McDonald.

Mrs. Lida McDonald, 67 years old, died early this morning at her home near Bethel church.

She is survived by three children, Mrs. Fred Bartles, Mrs. Leonard Hampson and James T. McDonald.

Funeral services have not been arranged.

at 10 o'clock last night and gave Gomper's condition practically unchanged and extremely grave.

"Nurse, this is a bad end—God bless our American institutions. May they grow better", was the parting message of the dying chief to his subordinates, grouped about his bed, bowed in grief.

Two nurses, Miss M. H. May of New York, and Miss Marie Johnston of San Antonio were in the room.

Stern Men Show Grief.

Official announcement of Gompers death came from Chester I. Wright, press representative of the American Federation of Labor five minutes after the veteran had passed away.

Wright in announcing the death simply said:

"The chief has gone."

Stern, purposeful men with gray hair in wrinkled business suits, cried unabashed. The men—who had followed the direction of the dead leader in the interests of Labor—spoke hardly a word.

Women of the party sobbed, shortly after the death was announced, telegrams were dispatched to General P. Calles, president of Mexico, whose inauguration Gompers was attending when stricken. Messages were sent to all members of the executive board of the Federation who are not here and to Mrs. Gompers at Washington.

Union Man Drives Ambulance.

At 5 o'clock members of the executive staff met in the rooms of Frank Morrison, secretary, who announced that an official statement would be made following the conference.

Funeral arrangements are being held up pending advices from the widow. It was the irony of fate that the things which counted most in the labor chief's life should figure with death so closely at hand. His arrival at the international Great Northern station was occasioned by a labor dispute, something which had become common place to him. This time he lay pale and helpless, too ill to decide, but his assistants decided quickly for him.

Two ambulances were at the train to meet him on account of a conflict in orders. One was owned by a firm whose head is a director of the local open shop association. The other was driven by a union chauffeur and it carried Mr. Gompers to the place of his death.

Pan-American Labor Leader.

Gompers went to Mexico City with a delegation of representatives of the American Federation of Labor, following his re-election as president at the Federation convention in El Paso, Texas. He attended the inauguration of President Calles of Mexico and insisted upon attending a bull fight afterwards, though he was experiencing trouble with his breathing in the rarified altitude of the Mexican capital and was so weak he had to be supported by friends as he left the Arena.

He lay ill for three days in his hotel room before the homeward trip was undertaken. During this time, he was re-elected president of the Pan-American Labor Unions.

Gompers' personal physicians counselled against his making the trip by train, advising that he wait until arrangements could be made for an airplane trip to the United States and the lower altitude which it was hoped would relieve his condition.

But he insisted and was carried on a stretcher aboard the Laredo express Wednesday night. After reaching the lower altitude nearing the American border he gained in strength and his attendants were hopeful of his recovery when he was brought to San Antonio and taken to a hotel yesterday afternoon.

It had been hoped that after a few days rest he could continue the trip to his home in New York.

Leaves Widow and Son.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—The death of Samuel Gompers, Labor's greatest leader, caused sincere regret today in Washington, where for two score years he has wielded an influence seldom possessed by a private citizen.

As president of the American Federation of Labor since 1882. Gompers has seen administrations come and go, but he had managed always to steadily increase the power and prestige of organized labor, at the same time adding to his personal influence and his wealth of friendships, not only within the membership of his own vast organization, but among officials of the government and in the other groups with which he was associated.

Gompers is survived by a widow and one son, Samuel Gompers Jr., who is chief clerk of the department of Labor. He was twice married. His first wife died some years ago.

Many tributes to the personal achievements of Gompers came today from government officials, senators and congressmen with whom he was associated in his work in behalf of the American labor movement.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Samuel Gompers may be buried in Sleepy Hollow cemetery, Tarrytown, N. Y., it was learned at the American Federation of Labor headquarters here today.

Some time ago, Gompers, of Dutch descent purchased a plot in Sleepy Hollow. When word of Gompers' death reached the Federation headquarters here, the Federation building was shrouded in black.

Morrison's Statement.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Dec. 13.—Following a meeting of the members of the executive council, Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, today issued a statement on the death of Samuel Gompers, president of the Federation. It follows:

"President Gompers died at 4:05 o'clock this morning despite heroic efforts to save his life. Dr. Lee Rice and Dr. W. S. Hanson of San Antonio, were in attendance. Dr. Rice stated that Mr. Gompers' heart failed to respond to restoratives. There had been an acute condition of the heart and kidneys for fully a year and a half past. It was impossible to overcome the weakness of the heart. Every possible measure was taken to prolong Mr. Gompers' life, but to no avail.

"At 2:30 this morning he uttered his last words: 'Nurse, this is the end,' he said. 'God bless our American institutions. May they grow better day by day.'

Last Slumber Peaceful

"From that time until the end Mr. Gompers was unconscious. His breathing was heavy until just a few moments before the end. As death approached, his face became calm and he sank peacefully into his slumber.

"In accordance with a wish expressed in Mexico City when he believed the end to be near, vice-president James Duncan held Mr. Gompers' hand as he passed away.

"Members of the executive council still present in San Antonio are discussing arrangements for the funeral and an announcement in that respect will be made later.

Co-Workers At Bedside.

"Mr. Gompers, during his last moments, was surrounded by a group, the members of which have for years been his intimate associates and co-workers. They were: Dr. Lee K. Rice [illegible] Hanson, of San Antonio; Frank Morrison, Secretary of the American Federation of Labor; vice-Presidents James Duncan, Matthew Woll and Martin F. Ryan; W. D. Trace False Report.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Dec. 13.—The report that Samuel Gompers died early while his train was passing through the state of San Luis Potasi in Mexico, was telephoned back to Mexico City by a railroad employe in the town of San Nicolas, according to members of the Gompers party. After the report had been sent, the train carrying the aged labor leader left San Nicolas and it was late in the afternoon before communication could be established.

BODY WILL GO TO WASHINGTON

SAN ANTONIO, Dec. 13.—The body of Samuel Gompers, veteran president of the American Federation of Labor, who died this morning, will be taken to Washington some time tonight.

This was decided upon by Frank Morrison, secretary of the Federation, following receipt of a telegram from the capital.

Contest Looms

president. The effort was a failure. Since that time, no one arose to challenge Gompers' leadership.

Several reasons have been assigned why Gompers, despite his failing health of late, successfully rode the numerous gathering storms that have arisen at recent conventions to remove him. First and foremost is that the older members of the federation felt that because of Gompers' long and faithful service he should be allowed to retain the helm until death, even though he might have become so incapacitated physically that he could no longer do active work.

This certainty was the cause that no fight was made on the veteran leader at the recent El Paso convention. There was at El Paso a strong minority that felt a younger and stronger man should be given the post. The proposal even was advanced that Gompers should be made either president emeritus, or a new post of assistant to the president should be created in order to relieve Gompers of much of the routine of the office. This never reached the convention floor because the older members intervened and pleaded that nothing be done to embarrass the "chief," as affectionately he was known to associates.

Woods Full of Candidates

With Gompers death the barriers are now all down. Literally the woods are full of candidates to succeed him.

Every member of the executive council, every president of an international union, admittedly, is in the field. Each will command strong support, a strength that may be difficult to divide or unite with other forces in determining upon two, or even three candidates. The result, therefore, may lead to the most bitter of clashes.

In the executive council itself, the fight may prove less acrimonious than was the contest immediately to come before the convention of the federation. These members are of the so-called "Gompers machine," or administration. They held office because Gompers wished them to, and they kept office largely because they agreed with him on important questions.

No one man in the council was closer to Gompers than Matthew Woll, a vice president, and chief of the photo-engravers union. For the last two years, at least, Woll was regarded everywhere in federation circles as "spokesman for the chief." It was to Woll, rather than Gomeprs, that persons having business with the Federation were referred. Statements from the federation usually came out under Woll's signature and were accepted as if Gompers' name had been signed to them.

But being so close to Gompers, Woll unquestionably will begin with a certain handicap. The men who opposed Gompers policies may unite against him. Woll is inextricably linked by the membership to all that Gompers stood for. But in the council, composed of Gompers men, Woll appears to have the lead for selection ad interim. It is not believed that the council will go outside of its own membership to select a new chief.

Others Have Followings.

Frank Morrison, veteran secretary, also has a strong following, as have Daniel Tobin, treasurer; William Green, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers, and George Berry, president of the Printing Pressmen, loom as a candidates with a great potential following. This is particularly true of Lewis, who might well be termed the candidate of the "younger members," that is, those who opposed the administration and policies of Gompers.

But even Lewis faces certain handicaps, first, he was beaten once by the Gompers administration. Again, well defined rumors have it that Lewis may get the labor post in the Coolidge cabinet after March 4. The federation almost unanmiously would like to see him ascend to that portfolio. Should Lewis be elected and then enter the cabinet, the presidency fight would have to be renewed all over again, for most certainly it is not believed that he would retin both positions.

No Guess on Successor.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Dec. 13.—Shortly after 9 o'clock this morning, Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, said that it was impossible to tell, even to the slightest degree, how Gompers' death would affect the Federation and its members.

"It is impossible at this time, to even hazard a guess as to who will be the next president of the Federation," said Morrison. "I do not know now whether the man selected to succeed Gompers will be permanent or not. In the event some one is selected soon, it is possible that he will be replaced following our convention in the spring.

"It is possible that a second conference to be held by the executive council here today will include this information."

WOUNDED MAN AWARDED $187

John Graul, Shot by Howard Fox, Gets State Compensation.

John Graul, Bloomfield, claymaker at the Colonial pottery, who was shot by Howard Fox, a fellow employe, last April, has been awarded compensation to the amount of $187.50 by the state compensation department, it was announced today.

Graul's first application was refused by the department officials who were under the impression that the wounded man had not been hurt in the course of his employment. A further investigation of the case was made, however, which resulted in the claim being allowed.

Fox, who had been claymaker at the pottery had been discharged, and Graul, who had been working as a helper at the plant was given his place. Fox, it is alleged, returned to the plant on the day of the shooting and was ordered away. He returned a second time and was again ordered out. About 2:30 o'clock, the same afternoon he is said to have returned for the third time, armed with a revolver.

Without a word of warning, he is said to have opened fire on Graul. Thef irst shot went wild, but the second struck him in the right arm. Fox, thinking that Graul had been killed, ran from the plant and committed suicide.

Graul was taken to the hospital where he was confined for about two weeks as the result of his injuries. In his claim for commensation, he said he was unable to work for several weeks as a result of the wound inflicted while in line of his employment.

Boys' Tournament At Y. M. C. A. Opens With Two Events

The athletic tournaments for members of the boys' groups of the Y. M. C. A. opened in the "Y" gymnasium today. The running high jump was the event for the elementaries, while the juniors engaged in a 60-yard potato race.

Winners in the jumping contest were: First, Paul O'Brien, Tigers; second, John Craig, Bears; third, Lawrence Lunsford, Bears; fourth, Virgil Wycoff, Bears; fifth, Walter Hanes, Bears. The Tigers scored 51 points as compared to 36 credited to the Bears.

Several exciting heats were run off before the winners were determined in the potato race. Allen Todd, of the Navy team, took first place; Donald Tatgenhorst, Army, was second; Donald Mylar, Navy, third; Harold Bailey, Army, fourth, and Alfred Earl, Army, fifth. The score was: Navy, 76; Army, 59.

The next events will be staged Saturday morning, Dec. 20.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—Under the leadership of the rails and motors, stocks jumped into higher price levels today in continuation of the rally which was in progress at the close of Friday's session. The best records in the former group were made by the "Van Swearingen" railroad shares, reflecting the confidence of the speculative district in the ultimate consummation of the gigantic merger which will link up the Nickle Plate, Pere Merquette, Erie, Chesapeake and Ohio and Hocking Valley lines. Motor and copper stocks were in good demand at higher prices and even the oil stocks threw off some of the depression which has been holding them down in recent weeks.

Additional evidence of commercial and industrial expansion was presented by the week end reviews of the reliable mercantile and economic agencies, with important gains reaching almost every department of the country's business activity. The best accomplishments were in the steel trade but the outlook in the agriculture, textile and other important industries was presented in very favorable light. Money conditions at the week-end were also favorable.

W. A. Wolfe Will Face Murder Trial In Lisbon Monday

William A. Wolfe, clay miner, charged with murder in the second degree as a result of the death of Mrs. Flora Dearth, Mulberry street restaurant owner, will go to trial Monday, before Judge Carl H. Smith, of Steubenville.

The state will be represented by Prosecuting Attorney J. C. Hanley and his assistant, Robert M. Brookes, while Walter W. Beck of Lisbon and Frank E. Grosshans of East Liverpool, appointed by the court, will defend Wolfe.

Wolfe was recently declared to be sane by a jury.

DEATH ROLL

Mrs. John Perdune.

Mrs. John Perdune, 63 years old, died yesterday at her home back of Newell. Death followed a brief illness.

She leaves her husband and four children: Anna, Tillie and Charles, at home, and Mrs. Saul McCoy, East Liverpool.

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Saul McCoy, Fairview street. Rev. D. W. MacLeod, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, will officiate.

Burial will be made in Spring Grove cemetery.

Helt Funeral.

Funeral services for Mrs. Arthur Helt, former resident, were held Thursday afternoon at Rush Run Church. Rev. Stewart, pastor of the Rayland Presbyterian church, officiated.

Burial was made in Hopewell cemetery.

Mrs. Lida McDonald.

Mrs. Lida McDonald, 67 years old, died early this morning at her home near Bethel church.

She is survived by three children, Mrs. Fred Bartles, Mrs. Leonard Hampson and James T. McDonald.

Funeral services have not been arranged.

at 10 o'clock last night and gave Gomper's condition practically unchanged and extremely grave.

"Nurse, this is a bad end—God bless our American institutions. May they grow better", was the parting message of the dying chief to his subordinates, grouped about his bed, bowed in grief.

Two nurses, Miss M. H. May of New York, and Miss Marie Johnston of San Antonio were in the room.

Stern Men Show Grief.

Official announcement of Gompers death came from Chester I. Wright, press representative of the American Federation of Labor five minutes after the veteran had passed away.

Wright in announcing the death simply said:

"The chief has gone."

Stern, purposeful men with gray hair in wrinkled business suits, cried unabashed. The men—who had followed the direction of the dead leader in the interests of Labor—spoke hardly a word.

Women of the party sobbed, shortly after the death was announced, telegrams were dispatched to General P. Calles, president of Mexico, whose inauguration Gompers was attending when stricken. Messages were sent to all members of the executive board of the Federation who are not here and to Mrs. Gompers at Washington.

Union Man Drives Ambulance.

At 5 o'clock members of the executive staff met in the rooms of Frank Morrison, secretary, who announced that an official statement would be made following the conference.

Funeral arrangements are being held up pending advices from the widow. It was the irony of fate that the things which counted most in the labor chief's life should figure with death so closely at hand. His arrival at the international Great Northern station was occasioned by a labor dispute, something which had become common place to him. This time he lay pale and helpless, too ill to decide, but his assistants decided quickly for him.

Two ambulances were at the train to meet him on account of a conflict in orders. One was owned by a firm whose head is a director of the local open shop association. The other was driven by a union chauffeur and it carried Mr. Gompers to the place of his death.

Pan-American Labor Leader.

Gompers went to Mexico City with a delegation of representatives of the American Federation of Labor, following his re-election as president at the Federation convention in El Paso, Texas. He attended the inauguration of President Calles of Mexico and insisted upon attending a bull fight afterwards, though he was experiencing trouble with his breathing in the rarified altitude of the Mexican capital and was so weak he had to be supported by friends as he left the Arena.

He lay ill for three days in his hotel room before the homeward trip was undertaken. During this time, he was re-elected president of the Pan-American Labor Unions.

Gompers' personal physicians counselled against his making the trip by train, advising that he wait until arrangements could be made for an airplane trip to the United States and the lower altitude which it was hoped would relieve his condition.

But he insisted and was carried on a stretcher aboard the Laredo express Wednesday night. After reaching the lower altitude nearing the American border he gained in strength and his attendants were hopeful of his recovery when he was brought to San Antonio and taken to a hotel yesterday afternoon.

It had been hoped that after a few days rest he could continue the trip to his home in New York.

Leaves Widow and Son.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—The death of Samuel Gompers, Labor's greatest leader, caused sincere regret today in Washington, where for two score years he has wielded an influence seldom possessed by a private citizen.

As president of the American Federation of Labor since 1882. Gompers has seen administrations come and go, but he had managed always to steadily increase the power and prestige of organized labor, at the same time adding to his personal influence and his wealth of friendships, not only within the membership of his own vast organization, but among officials of the government and in the other groups with which he was associated.

Gompers is survived by a widow and one son, Samuel Gompers Jr., who is chief clerk of the department of Labor. He was twice married. His first wife died some years ago.

Many tributes to the personal achievements of Gompers came today from government officials, senators and congressmen with whom he was associated in his work in behalf of the American labor movement.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Samuel Gompers may be buried in Sleepy Hollow cemetery, Tarrytown, N. Y., it was learned at the American Federation of Labor headquarters here today.

Some time ago, Gompers, of Dutch descent purchased a plot in Sleepy Hollow. When word of Gompers' death reached the Federation headquarters here, the Federation building was shrouded in black.

Morrison's Statement.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Dec. 13.—Following a meeting of the members of the executive council, Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, today issued a statement on the death of Samuel Gompers, president of the Federation. It follows:

"President Gompers died at 4:05 o'clock this morning despite heroic efforts to save his life. Dr. Lee Rice and Dr. W. S. Hanson of San Antonio, were in attendance. Dr. Rice stated that Mr. Gompers' heart failed to respond to restoratives. There had been an acute condition of the heart and kidneys for fully a year and a half past. It was impossible to overcome the weakness of the heart. Every possible measure was taken to prolong Mr. Gompers' life, but to no avail.

"At 2:30 this morning he uttered his last words: 'Nurse, this is the end,' he said. 'God bless our American institutions. May they grow better day by day.'

Last Slumber Peaceful

"From that time until the end Mr. Gompers was unconscious. His breathing was heavy until just a few moments before the end. As death approached, his face became calm and he sank peacefully into his slumber.

"In accordance with a wish expressed in Mexico City when he believed the end to be near, vice-president James Duncan held Mr. Gompers' hand as he passed away.

"Members of the executive council still present in San Antonio are discussing arrangements for the funeral and an announcement in that respect will be made later.

Co-Workers At Bedside.

"Mr. Gompers, during his last moments, was surrounded by a group, the members of which have for years been his intimate associates and co-workers. They were: Dr. Lee K. Rice and W. S. Hanson, of San Antonio; Frank Morrison, Secretary of the American Federation of Labor; vice-Presidents James Duncan, Matthew Woll and Martin F. Ryan; W. D. Mahon, President of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electrical Railway Employes; John P. Frey, editor of the Molders Journal and President of the Ohio State Federation of Labor; Clarence C. Thorne, member of the American Federation of Labor research staff; William C. Roberts, chairman of the American Federation of Labor Legislative committee; Chester Wright, Director of A. F. of L. Information and Publicity; J. R. Giles and E. J. Tracy, members of the A. F. of L. T. J. McQuaid, Plate Printers' Union, Washington; C. N. Idar, A. F. of L. organizer in San Antonio; Joseph L. Lynch, member of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes, and A. L. Bytol, United States Immigration officer.

"The two nurses present were Miss M. H. May, R. N., of New York, and Miss Marie Jameton, R. N., of San Antonio."

Trace False Report.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Dec. 13.—The report that Samuel Gompers died early while his train was passing through the state of San Luis Potasi in Mexico, was telephoned back to Mexico City by a railroad employe in the town of San Nicolas, according to members of the Gompers party. After the report had been sent, the train carrying the aged labor leader left San Nicolas and it was late in the afternoon before communication could be established.

BODY WILL GO TO WASHINGTON

SAN ANTONIO, Dec. 13.—The body of Samuel Gompers, veteran president of the American Federation of Labor, who died this morning, will be taken to Washington some time tonight.

This was decided upon by Frank Morrison, secretary of the Federation, following receipt of a telegram from the capital.

Contest Looms

president. The effort was a failure. Since that time, no one arose to challenge Gompers' leadership.

Several reasons have been assigned why Gompers, despite his failing health of late, successfully rode the numerous gathering storms that have arisen at recent conventions to remove him. First and foremost is that the older members of the federation felt that because of Gompers' long and faithful service he should be allowed to retain the helm until death, even though he might have become so incapacitated physically that he could no longer do active work.

This certainty was the cause that no fight was made on the veteran leader at the recent El Paso convention. There was at El Paso a strong minority that felt a younger and stronger man should be given the post. The proposal even was advanced that Gompers should be made either president emeritus, or a new post of assistant to the president should be created in order to relieve Gompers of much of the routine of the office. This never reached the convention floor because the older members intervened and pleaded that nothing be done to embarrass the "chief," as affectionately he was known to associates.

Woods Full of Candidates

With Gompers death the barriers are now all down. Literally the woods are full of candidates to succeed him.

Every member of the executive council, every president of an international union, admittedly, is in the field. Each will command strong support, a strength that may be difficult to divide or unite with other forces in determining upon two, or even three candidates. The result, therefore, may lead to the most bitter of clashes.

In the executive council itself, the fight may prove less acrimonious than was the contest immediately to come before the convention of the federation. These members are of the so-called "Gompers machine," or administration. They held office because Gompers wished them to, and they kept office largely because they agreed with him on important questions.

No one man in the council was closer to Gompers than Matthew Woll, a vice president, and chief of the photo-engravers union. For the last two years, at least, Woll was regarded everywhere in federation circles as "spokesman for the chief." It was to Woll, rather than Gomeprs, that persons having business with the Federation were referred. Statements from the federation usually came out under Woll's signature and were accepted as if Gompers' name had been signed to them.

But being so close to Gompers, Woll unquestionably will begin with a certain handicap. The men who opposed Gompers policies may unite against him. Woll is inextricably linked by the membership to all that Gompers stood for. But in the council, composed of Gompers men, Woll appears to have the lead for selection ad interim. It is not believed that the council will go outside of its own membership to select a new chief.

Others Have Followings.

Frank Morrison, veteran secretary, also has a strong following, as have Daniel Tobin, treasurer; William Green, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers, and George Berry, president of the Printing Pressmen, loom as a candidates with a great potential following. This is particularly true of Lewis, who might well be termed the candidate of the "younger members," that is, those who opposed the administration and policies of Gompers.

But even Lewis faces certain handicaps, first, he was beaten once by the Gompers administration. Again, well defined rumors have it that Lewis may get the labor post in the Coolidge cabinet after March 4. The federation almost unanmiously would like to see him ascend to that portfolio. Should Lewis be elected and then enter the cabinet, the presidency fight would have to be renewed all over again, for most certainly it is not believed that he would retin both positions.

No Guess on Successor.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Dec. 13.—Shortly after 9 o'clock this morning, Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, said that it was impossible to tell, even to the slightest degree, how Gompers' death would affect the Federation and its members.

"It is impossible at this time, to even hazard a guess as to who will be the next president of the Federation," said Morrison. "I do not know now whether the man selected to succeed Gompers will be permanent or not. In the event some one is selected soon, it is possible that he will be replaced following our convention in the spring.

"It is possible that a second conference to be held by the executive council here today will include this information."

AUTO CRASHES ON INCREASE

Solons May Have to Act Against Reckless Drivers.

As a result of the increasing number of automobile accidents at the intersection of Tenth and Center streets, as well as at some of the other much used crossings, city officials express the opinion that councilmanic action may be necessary to safeguard the lives and property of motor travelers.

A large quantity of paint has been furnished the police department with which to paint "stop" signs at important street intersections in compliance with a recent decision of solons to take steps to cut down accidents at cross streets.

After the signs are painted—what? is the question asked by authorities. Will it be necessary to enact an ordinance providing police penalties for those who refuse to heed the sign, or will the city place motorists upon an "honor" system? This is a problem, they concede, that may have to be ironed by solons.

Police point out that the street intersections, especially those at Ninth and Main, Ninth and Center, Tenth and Main, Tenth and Center, and at Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets in Center, are becoming more dangerous daily.

Within the last two weeks approximately half a dozen minor accidents have occurred along this route. In no case, fortunately, was any person hurt, although damage to automobiles has been rather heavy.

Police and motorists point out that many autoists are looking for the other fellow to stop, and the other fellow apparently thinks the same way. If vehicles approaching on certain streets were compelled to stop or slow down the accident list would be reduced, it is conceded.

20TH CENTURY CLUB HAS PARTY

Guests were present from this city, East Liverpool and Congo, W. Va., including Mrs. Jason Brookes, Mrs. Isaac Fleming, Mrs. J. C. Carey, Mrs. T. H. Sant, and Mrs. Mary Nease, East Liverpool; Miss Bess Johnson, Congo; and Mrs. George Lowary and Mrs. J. C. Calhoun, of this city.

The party opened in the parlors of the church in charge of the club president, Miss Elsie Berg. Christmas carols were played by Miss Carrie Southwick. Mrs. Jason Brookes, state officers of the Federation of Women's Clubs, gave a talk on work of the federation and also discussed the organization's magazine. In addition she commended the club's rest room project.

A Christmas story from "David Grayson's Adventures" was given by Mrs. S. E. Daw.

Two selections were sung by Miss Pauline Berg, accompanied by Mrs. A. J. Stolliper. Miss Berg sang: "O, Little Star of Bethlehem" by Bartlett, and "Song of the Chimes," by Worrell. Christmas carols, games and a social hour concluded the program prior to the banquet.

A turkey dinner was served in the dining room by members of the Mizpah Sunday school class of the church. The tables were appropriately decorated, small Christmas trees, garlands and colors suggestive of the season being used in the general scheme.

Mrs. D. S. Morrison proved a capable toastmistress. A Christmas acrostic featured the program following dinner, brief toasts being given as follows: C for Christmas, Mrs. A. J. Campbell; H for helpfulness, Mrs. W. T. Lones; R for riches, Mrs. A. G. Smith; I for indebtedness, Mrs. A. B. Murdock; S for savings, Miss Janet Kerr; T for Twentieth Century club, Miss Mary Cope; M for merriment, Mrs. E. L. McGarey; A for afterthought, Mrs. J. M. Darbaker; S for satisfaction, Mrs. Naomi Forner.

Committees in charge of the party were: Social committee and hostesses—Mrs. A. J. Stolliper, Mrs. A. B. Murdock and Miss Nan Stevenson; program—Mrs. W. F. Lones and Mrs. S. E. Daw; music—Miss Carrie Southwick, Mrs. E. L. McGarey, Mrs. W. F. Lones and Mrs. D. S. Morrison.

SCHOOL RELIEF, GASOLINE TAX ON STATE LIST

Stage Cleared for Biennial Session of Ohio Legislature.

FOUR PROPOSALS

General Taxation and Revision of Primary System on Slate.

COLUMBUS, Dec. 12. — With the stage cleared for the biennial gathering of the Ohio legislature and with both House and Senate hoppers reinforced for the anticipated deluge of bills, political observers in the State Capital today turned their attention to the measures which are expected to be thrust to the fore at the very outset of the eighty-sixth General Assembly which convenes here next month.

While the list of problems awaiting solution by the next legislature is admittedly long, four propositions of major importance give indication of pre-empting the legislature's time from the minute preliminary and perfunctory matters are dispensed with. These were:

1—General taxation.
2—Financial relief for schools.
3—Revision of state primary system.
4—Gasoline tax.

Gov. Donahey, whose message to the legislature is in the final stages of completion, has carefully guarded the contents of that document, but administration spokesmen have voiced the belief that the Governor will come out firmly for Home Rule in taxation.

Home Rule Taxation.

Although the general belief here is that no basic changes in the state tax structure will be put through at the coming session, leaders in the movement for home rule in taxation believe relief measures intended to save more than a score of the state larger cities from financial embarrassment might be successfull.

Representative Robert A. Taft, Cincinnati, author of the ill-fated Taft taxation bill of the last session, outlined a tentative tax measure while here to meet legislators interested in the caucus of Republican senators. Briefly Representative Taft would:

(a) Place cities on an equal footing with counties and school districts in issuing bonds without a vote of the people.

(b) Permit cities to vote as many local levies as desired, outside the 15-mill Smith law limit, promulgating the purposes for which proceeds from the levies are to be used.

(c) Repeal provisions of the Smith law stipulating that levies for interest and sinking funds take precedence over those for improvements and current expenses.

(d) Provide that when voters pass on bond issues they indicate whether interest or sinking fund levies shall be placed outside the Smith law limitation.

(e) Provide that when bond issues are made without a vote of the people they be submitted to the state tax commission which may reject the measures if incidental, interest and sinking fund levies would reduce revenue for current expenses below an advisable level

(f) Provide that when a municipality has fixed its own tax limitations those imposed by the legislature shall not apply.

Urge Gasoline Tax

Mr. Taft emphasized the necessity for permitting cities to raise money with which to carry on governmental activities, if they are to be allowed home rule in this line. Here the problem of reappraising real estate was admitted as relevant.

In his recent report, State Auditor Tracy called attention to the $58,000,000 increase in the state's bonded indebtedness in the last year, with the admonition that something must be done by the next legislature to relieve the situation. He made no definite recommendation.

A gasoline tax of one or two cents on each gallon retailed has been approved by many automobile clubs and other organizations in Ohio as a means of raising additional revenue which must be provided if the state is to continue to build roads. It is claimed the proceeds from the sale of state license tags are insufficient to carry on the work.

State Highway Director Boulay has come out in favor of the proposed gas tax as a fair means of proportioning the burden of road maintenance. It is estimated that about $8,000,000 a year would be derived from a 2-cent levy.

Pre-Primary Conventions.

Opponents of the measure have attacked it as a "nuisance tax," in a class with the tobacco and drug taxes, not because of any alleged unfairness in the tax itself. In any event legislative observers claim the bills appearance at the next session is assured.

Permanent relief for schools in financial distress will be the aim of state Director of Education Riegel, he said. Gov. Donahey's committee of seven, appointed to study the school problem and draft proposed relief legislation, is to hold its first meeting here Monday.

If the overwhelming Republican majorities in both houses live up to their party campaign pledge, an attempt will be made to put through a law providing for pre-primary conventions. Democratic leaders have said that if pre primary conventions are to be authorized it should be done by amending the primary election clause of the state constitution. It was understood the governor would not be asked to sign such a bill but merely let it become a law automatically, if it is passed by the legislature. In return, it was said the Republican majority in the senate would take a more liberal attitude in considering appointments made by the Democratic governor.

Senate Committee Meeting

COLUMBUS, Dec. 12.—Meeting of the senate committee on committees was called for December 18 by State Senator J. R. Gardner, Cincinnati, the new majority floor leader and president pro-tem, it was announced today.

Republican senators were instructed to furnish the committee a list of standing committees on which they would like to serve. Committee assignments are to be made at the meeting next week, according to Gardner, who is chairman of the committee on committees.

The two Democratic senators, R. L. Adair, Wooster, and W. F. Garver, Millersburg, were not expected to go through the formality of a caucus.

AUTO CRASHES ON INCREASE

Solons May Have to Act Against Reckless Drivers.

As a result of the increasing number of automobile accidents at the intersection of Tenth and Center streets, as well as at some of the other much used crossings, city officials express the opinion that councilmanic action may be necessary to safeguard the lives and property of motor travelers.

A large quantity of paint has been furnished the police department with which to paint "stop" signs at important street intersections in compliance with a recent decision of solons to take steps to cut down accidents at cross streets.

After the signs are painted—what? is the question asked by authorities. Will it be necessary to enact an ordinance providing police penalties for those who refuse to heed the sign, or will the city place motorists upon an "honor" system? This is a problem, they concede, that may have to be ironed by solons.

Police point out that the street intersections, especially those at Ninth and Main, Ninth and Center, Tenth and Main, Tenth and Center, and at Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets in Center, are becoming more dangerous daily.

Within the last two weeks approximately half a dozen minor accidents have occurred along this route. In no case, fortunately, was any person hurt, although damage to automobiles has been rather heavy.

Police and motorists point out that many autoists are looking for the other fellow to stop, and the other fellow apparently thinks the same way. If vehicles approaching on certain streets were compelled to stop or slow down the accident list would be reduced, it is conceded.

20TH CENTURY CLUB HAS PARTY

Guests were present from this city, East Liverpool and Congo, W. Va., including Mrs. Jason Brookes, Mrs. Isaac Fleming, Mrs. J. C. Carey, Mrs. T. H. Sant, and Mrs. Mary Nease, East Liverpool; Miss Bess Johnson, Congo; and Mrs. George Lowary and Mrs. J. C. Calhoun, of this city.

The party opened in the parlors of the church in charge of the club president, Miss Elsie Berg. Christmas carols were played by Miss Carrie Southwick, Mrs. Jason Brookes, state officers of the Federation of Women's Clubs, gave a talk on work of the federation and also discussed the organization's magazine. In addition she commended the club's rest room project.

A Christmas story from "David Grayson's Adventures" was given by Mrs. S. E. Daw.

Two selections were sung by Miss Pauline Berg, accompanied by Mrs. A. J. Stolliper. Miss Berg sang: "O, Little Star of Bethlehem" by Bartlett, and "Song of the Chimes," by Worrell. Christmas carols, games and a social hour concluded the program prior to the banquet.

A turkey dinner was served in the dining room by members of the Mizpah Sunday school class of the church. The tables were appropriately decorated, small Christmas trees, garlands and colors suggestive of the season being used in the general scheme.

Mrs. D. S. Morrison proved a capable toastmistress. A Christmas acrostic featured the program following dinner, brief toasts being given as follows: C for Christmas, Mrs. A. J. Campbell; H for helpfulness, Mrs. W. T. Lones; R for riches, Mrs. A. G. Smith; I for indebtedness, Mrs. A. B. Murdock; S for savings, Miss Janet Kerr; T for Twentieth Century club, Miss Mary Cope; M for merriment, Mrs. E. L. McGarey; A for afterthought, Mrs. J. M. Darbaker; S for satisfaction, Mrs. Naomi Forner.

Committees in charge of the party were: Social committee and hostesses—Mrs. A. J. Stolliper, Mrs. A. B. Murdock and Miss Nan Stevenson; program—Mrs. W. F. Lones and Mrs. S. E. Daw; music—Miss Carrie Southwick, Mrs. E. L. McGarey, Mrs. W. F. Lones and Mrs. D. S. Morrison.

Four new members were received by the organization, making a total increase of 10 within the last two weeks.

The regular exercises of the legion were followed by a program of recitations, music, riddles, and games. Miss Kate McGillivray tendered members surprise packets of candy.

The next meeting will be held in two weeks.

SCHOOL RELIEF, GASOLINE TAX ON STATE LIST

Stage Cleared for Biennial Session of Ohio Legislature.

General Taxation and Revision of Primary System on Slate.

COLUMBUS, Dec. 12. — With the stage cleared for the biennial gathering of the Ohio legislature and with both House and Senate hoppers reinforced for the anticipated deluge of bills, political observers in the State Capital today turned their attention to the measures which are expected to be thrust to the fore at the very outset of the eighty-sixth General Assembly which convenes here next month.

While the list of problems awaiting solution by the next legislature is admittedly long, four propositions of major importance give indication of pre-empting the legislature's time from the minute preliminary and perfunctory matters are dispensed with. These were:

1—General taxation.
2—Financial relief for schools.
3—Revision of state primary system.
4—Gasoline tax.

Gov. Donahey, whose message to the legislature is in the final stages of completion, has carefully guarded the contents of that document, but administration spokesmen have voiced the belief that the Governor will come out firmly for Home Rule in taxation.

Home Rule Taxation.

Although the general belief here is that no basic changes in the state tax structure will be put through at the coming session, leaders in the movement for home rule in taxation believe relief measures intended to save more than a score of the state larger cities from financial embarrassment might be successful.

Representative Robert A. Taft, Cincinnati, author of the ill-fated Taft taxation bill of the last session, outlined a tentative tax measure while here to meet legislators interested in the caucus of Republican senators. Briefly Representative Taft would:

(a) Place cities on an equal footing with counties and school districts in issuing bonds without a vote of the people.

(b) Permit cities to vote as many local levies as desired, outside the 15-mill Smith law limit, promulgating the purposes for which proceeds from the levies are to be used.

(c) Repeal provisions of the Smith law stipulating that levies for interest and sinking funds take precedence over those for improvements and current expenses.

(d) Provide that when voters pass on bond issues they indicate whether interest or sinking fund levies shall be placed outside the Smith law limitation.

(e) Provide that when bond issues are made without a vote of the people they be submitted to the state tax commission which may reject the measures if incidental, interest and sinking fund levies would reduce revenue for current expenses below an advisable level

(f) Provide that when a municipality has fixed its own tax limitations those imposed by the legislature shall not apply.

Urge Gasoline Tax

Mr. Taft emphasized the necessity for permitting cities to raise money with which to carry on governmental activities, if they are to be allowed home rule in this line. Here the problem of reappraising real estate was admitted as relevant.

In his recent report, State Auditor Tracy called attention to the $58,000,000 increase in the state's bonded indebtedness in the last year, with the admonition that something must be done by the next legislature to relieve the situation. He made no definite recommendation.

A gasoline tax of one or two cents on each gallon retailed has been approved by many automobile clubs and other organizations in Ohio as a means of raising additional revenue which must be provided if the state is to continue to build roads. It is claimed the proceeds from the sale of state license tags are insufficient to carry on the work.

State Highway Director Boulay has come out in favor of the proposed gas tax as a fair means of proportioning the burden of road maintenance. It is estimated that about $8,000,000 a year would be derived from a 2-cent levy.

Pre-Primary Conventions.

Opponents of the measure have attacked it as a "nuisance tax," in a class with the tobacco and drug taxes, not because of any alleged unfairness in the tax itself. In any event legislative observers claim the bills appearance at the next session is assured.

Permanent relief for schools in financial distress will be the aim of state Director of Education Riegel, he said. Gov. Donahey's committee of seven, appointed to study the school problem and draft proposed relief legislation, is to hold its first meeting here Monday.

If the overwhelming Republican majorities in both houses live up to their party campaign pledge, an attempt will be made to put through a law providing for pre-primary conventions. Democratic leaders have said that if pre primary conventions are to be authorized it should be done by amending the primary election clause of the state constitution. It was understood the governor would not be asked to sign such a bill but merely let it become a law automatically, if it is passed by the legislature. In return, it was said the Republican majority in the senate would take a more liberal attitude in considering appointments made by the Democratic governor.

Senate Committee Meeting

COLUMBUS, Dec. 12.—Meeting of the senate committee on committees was called for December 18 by State Senator J. R. Gardner, Cincinnati, the new majority floor leader and president pro-tem, it was announced today.

Republican senators were instructed to furnish the committee a list of standing committees on which they would like to serve. Committee assignments are to be made at the meeting next week, according to Gardner, who is chairman of the committee on committees.

The two Democratic senators, R. L. Adair, Wooster, and W. F. Garver, Millersburg, were not expected to go through the formality of a caucus.

Shop Early and Avoid the Rush

In conjunction with the "shop early, mail early" appeal of the postoffice department, officials of which have the interest of postal clerks, mail carriers and the salespeople behind the counter at heart as well the expedition of shipment of gifts for distant points, East Liverpool shoppers should heed the suggestion of street car posters to visit the stores from 10 A. M. to 4 P. M. and avoid the rush.

Compliance with the request means that Christmas shoppers will not only get a wider variety and fresher selection of stocks, but they will make it easier on themselves and the salespeople who wait on them.

And, too, they will have more time to make purchases and will co-operate in the movement to relieve the ever-growing traffic congestion which is always at its peak in the holiday season.

Traction companies everywhere are urging shoppers to use the cars during the dull periods of the day, thus they will not be caught in the midst of traffic rushes--periods when the cars are crowded with people who are going to and from work. Cars are always taxed to capacity early in the morning and in the evening, and if a heavy quota of shoppers is added it interferes with schedules.

Shop early and avoid the rush.

Children's Gifts

Many inexperienced parents have joyfully planned for a small child's first Christmas, only to find that the youngster turned away uninterested from beautiful and complicated toys to some simple, inexpensive object—a rag doll or a cotton rabbit or a box with an easily removable lid. Often adoring aunts and uncles bring lavish gifts to little folks who ask for no elaborate aids to happiness.

This is something to keep in mind when doing the Christmas shopping. It is well to suit children's gifts to children's ages. A doll for a child barely out of babyhood should be practically indestructible, light enough to be carried about the house easily, soft enough to be sat upon or taken to bed at nap time with equal comfort and safety. The fascinating doll that opens and closes its eyes, and can be sewed for and dressed and undressed, is fun for the older child.

It is the same with other toys. The very simplest of crude wooden blocks give exactly as much joy to the very small boy as the complicated mechanical or building outfit brings to the older boys.

Children's gifts may be spoiled, but their happiness cannot be increased, by giving them gifts unsuited to their years.

Selected Immigrants

Immigration on a carefully worked out plan is going forward in Canada. Representatives from all the Canadian provinces have recently gone to London to work there with the deputy minister of immigration and colonization in selecting the first thousand families that are to migrate to Canada under the "assisted family settlement" agreement between the Dominion and the British governments.

Under this agreement Canada is to provide good farm land on easy terms of payment, the British government is to furnish funds up to $1,500 per family for equipment, and the Canadian government, through its representatives, is to approve the families sent out.

This approval is given in the mother country before the would-be immigrants leave their native land. Only well qualified applicants will be approved, but once accepted they will be assured suitable farm land to settle upon and all the financial assistance needed at the beginning of their immigration venture.

It is an attractive plan. Many Americans are convinced that the careful selection of immigrants in Europe before they sail for our shores is quite as important in solving Uncle Sam's immigration problem as numerical exclusion. Canada is already practicing what America so far has accepted in theory only.

A "high-brow" may have a low forehead, as psychologists say, but do you ever find a narrow-eyed person with a broad mind?

TODAY

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

(The opinions expressed in this column are strictly those of Mr. Brisbane and not necessarily in consonance with the policies of The Review-Tribune).

WERE CAN MAN BE HAPPY?

A reader asks, "Is a man happy if he remain in the humble place and station of his birth?"

A man may find in the lonely cottage, the village, or in the big city of his birth, full opportunity to develop all his powers, to do all the good that is in him, to utilize wisely the uplifting force that we call ambition.

As a general proposition, however, a cultivated and civilized human being, like a cultivated and civilized shade tree, demands occasional transplanting. Man's destiny is to move about on the face of the earth. If he stays in one spot like a tree or a gooseberry bush, he doesn't give himself a full chance.

It is good for the country boy to go into the city. It is good for the city boy to go into the country—it is good for each to study that which he has not seen.

CONTENTED MIND BRINGS HAPPINESS

At his birth a human being is little better than a mass of putty. He is a poor, almost bald, toothless, deaf and blind little creature, unable to do anything for himself. From this "station of his birth," which is a condition of absolute helplessness and uselessness, he may develop to be one of the great men of the world. Or he may stop and pass his life at any one of a million intermediate stations, which is that of physical development and commonplace life.

The force we call ambition is a feeling not only of restlessness and desire for change and achievement, but especially a moral impulse to do good.

We all feel within ourselves a force stirring vaguely, indefinitely. We want to do something, if it is based on desire to be useful to other people, may properly be called ambition.

The successful, ambitious human being is the one that makes the best possible use of his or her powers.

The world is full of perverted emotion, improperly called ambition.

That perverted ambition is selfishness, vanity, baseless egotism that makes us refuse to do useful work that we might do because it does not seem important enough.

AMBITION NOT AN EMOTION

The young girl should be ambitious—in the future and in the present.

As to her future ambitions, she may let her mind roam, as far as she will. If she wants to think of marrying a king, or marrying the little boy around the corner and making a king of him by her influence, let her do so. If she wants to think that she will combine the powers of Rachel, Jenny Lind and Bernhardt—that won't hurt her.

But she must have an ambition right in the present—definite ambition.

She must make up her mind that she will do what she can to be useful in the house where she lives, and to set a good example wherever she may be.

Whatever good there is in small boys is usually based upon their ambition for girls of their own age. Girls should remember that they have an important work to do today in influencing the minds of lads with whom they come in contact, and inspiring in such boys admiration of good character.

The young boy should be ambitious also.

And while he dreams occasionally of being president of the United States, knocking Dempsey senseless, or making the best flying machine, he must have for his present ambition something simpler and more feasible.

If his people are poor, the first ambition he should have is to support himself and help them.

If they are making a sacrifice to give him an education that will help all of them later, the boy's ambition should be to do everything in his work to be worthy of the kindness and the opportunity they are giving him.

Every boy, young man and young woman should have ambition to understand public affairs, and, if possible, to influence them. Power lies in all of the people.

Every boy, girl, young man and woman should study political affairs, understand public questions and be ambitious, in a little or big way, to help make this land a genuine republic, governed in the interests of the people.

POWER LIES IN ALL PEOPLE

It is proper that young men and women should have a reasonable desire to accumulate money. Poverty is slavery.

Only the greatest genius can do real work in the face of poverty—and to do it he must content to endure suffering and humiliation.

Every young man should have a good, honest ambition to make a reasonable fortune, to put himself and those dependent on him beyond the reach of want, beyond the whims of some other human being.

But the making of money should be a secondary ambition. It is, properly speaking, not ambition at all—only a development of the instinct of self-preservation.

Real thought should dwell on the possibility of doing something entirely new which will be of benefit to all of the world—or of doing EXTREMELY WELL something that is necessary.

Encourage your own ambition, nurse it, and mark out a definite course for it.

A man can no more sail through life without a guiding, directing will than a ship can sail across the ocean without a needle pointing in one direction all the time.

You may change your course; you may find as your abilities develop that you must change your plans.

Don't be afraid or ashamed to change the course of your ambition.

But have a plan, and stick to it until you make up your mind that it was wrongly selected.

And, remember, this: No man is worth his salt who does not try to do something that will help others. Everything that we enjoy on this earth—comforts, luxury—we owe to the ambition of unselfish, brave men that lived here before us. Try to be like them, in a big or a little way, and good luck to you.

NEWSY GOSSIP OF BIG CITIES

By FRANK E. MASON.

PARIS, Dec. 13.—American heiresses seeking titled husbands will desert Paris for other marital hunting grounds if a project of the Harriet government abolishing titles is made a law by the French chambers.

The proposed act of parliament will make it a serious offense, punishable by a heavy fine for government or municipal officials to mention with the name of any French citizen on official records. Lists of army officers, court records, tax tolls and municipal records will call "His Highness, Prince Murat," just plain Monsieur Murat."

Le Quotidien, a staunch supporter of the Herriot government, considers the bill hard on American heiresses. "As an example of the practical application of the measure," explains Le Quotidien, "the mayor in signing the marriage certificate of Count Roquestebouil de Montgradail with Miss Swineherd, of Chicago, daughter of the well-known millionaire pork packer, will write only 'Monsieur Roquestebouil de Montgradail' and 'Miss Swineherd.'

"Although she may call herself 'Madame la Comtesse' as much as she pleases in her own salon, Miss Swinherd will never be a countess in the eyes of the French law."

Quoting Count Royer's work to prove that more than 25,000 claims to nobility in France are absolutely unfounded as far as nobility of "race" is concerned, Le Quotidien recalls the tremendous increase in the hanks of nobility in the last century.

"Napoleon created nine princes, 32 dukes, 388 counts, 1,090 barons. The restoration made 17 dukes, 70 marquis, 83 counts, 62 viscounts, 215 barons and 785 letters of nobility. The July government created three dukes, 19 counts, 17 viscounts and 59 barons. And finally Napoleon II rewarded his faithful by making 12 dukes, 19 counts and viscounts and 21 barons.

The Latin Quarter days of romance of Trilbys and Mimis, when students were regular devils with a glass of beer and whose worst vices were love affairs, have become legends of the past, fallen before the drug needle and the cocaine peddler, reveals "Comoedia" in an article which has shocked blase Paris.

"The Sorbonne students are a cosmopolitan society where one meets 20 different races. Some are studious, others are not," says Comoedia. "If the student body is sincere it must admit that cocaine—sold by poor medical students who thus earn their living to continue their studies—has made terrible ravages in the student quarter.

"We can cite the case of a young co-ed, initiated into the drug habit by a friend in the medical college. Suffering excruciating pain, subject to erotic hallucinations she has been taken away to a sanitarium to die."

Comoedia goes on to name student cafes where drug peddlers work unrestricted by the authorities.

"Poor Latin Quarter, so fallen, so ignorant, so weak! Here, in the midst of the vulgar debauchery, disastrous for young intellects, cocaine may work its ravages unrestrained. One is compelled to demand in consternation why the students' associations haven't yet taken the initiative for a counter-offensive, since the police, informed of the progress of the drug evil, are asleep, waiting until it is too late to act."

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—This is the day of the "cafe kiddie." You see him these days in almost every public restaurant, resembling the stage dwarf, and dressed in dinner clothes with all the up-to-date trappings, including a boutonniere.

Bringing children to cafes is one of the fads since prohibition. Parents feel he is safe from the frivolities that liquor sometimes engenders. And so he sits with them immaculately starched and primped, smooth and self-assured.

They are the children from whom few thrills are left. They know New York, Paris, London, The Riviera and Palm Beach. They would laugh at the idea of playing with toys. The mysteries of the haymow, the stone bruise and barefoot pleasures are denied them.

They chat as nonchalantly about the reigning play as the chronic first nighter and they can discuss the best selling book with amazing knowledge. You see them at 12 years apparently surfeited with all the worldiness usually packed into a life time.

I noticed one the other night ordering from a menu entirely in French. He chose his dishes with all the skill of the accomplished epicure, and instead of obeying the dictum to be seen and not heard, he was quite the life of the party. He did all the talking.

In those restaurants where dancing is permitted, the cafe kiddie does his stuff. And he remains as long as the rest. But here are children who rarely smile. There is none of that buoyant vibrancy that only Youth achieves.

Instead there is a pathetic lanquor. Their life is a round of tutors and well bred conversational blah. Not to have been chased from a watermelon patch or to have dug a cave in the banks of the creek means just one thing. They have not lived.

The famous Palais Royal where Paul Whiteman's jazz band made its first world wide bid for fame is doing a rushing business as a chop suey joint. This makes the fifteenth Chinese restaurant to open between Herald square and Columbus circle since Broadway went, practically speaking, dry.

Several years ago "Bud" Fisher, the cartoonist, was employed on a New York morning newspaper. He received a bigger offer from another paper and asked to be released from his contract, but was refused. Several days later he was in the art room and an Efficient Eustace came snooping in to see what was going on. "Bud" was smoking a cigarette.

"Smoking is not permitted here!" said the efficiency expert.

"What will happen if I smoke?" asked the cartoonist.

"You will be dismissed."

"Fine. I'll be here at 2 o'clock with three packages of cigarettes to be lighted one after another and if you'll fire me, I'll have $10,000 in cash to hand over to you."

Fisher was there—but the efficiency expert was not.

Along Park Row there is a seedy looking fellow who often steps out of shadows at night to greet newspapermen and ask for the loan of small change. Three years ago he was one of the star men and prosperous. But he happened to be one of the very few who have betrayed their calling. He fostered a fake story that embarrassed his paper—and now he is paying the penalty.

IS HUMOR DYING OUT?

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—"The American sense of humor is not imperiled," was the reassuring statement issued late last evening by John A. Ferrall, specialist in humorous affairs.

The reason for this statement was that your correspondent had been viewing with great alarm rumors that laughter was becoming defunct. Dr. Charles G. Shaw, professor of philosophy at New York university, has aroused the country by prophesying the death of laughter. His exhaustive researches on the subject led him inevitably to the following conclusion: People laugh at what they do not understand. Civilization promotes understanding. Therefore, by all the rules of algebra, the more civilized we become, the less we shall laugh.

To illustrate his theory, the doctor refers us to prof. Einstein, who sees nothing humorous in relativity nor in anything else, and to Trotzky and Mahatma Ghandi, who have almost attained to the same state of imperturbable poise and understanding.

There are many persons still alive who giggle with simple pleasure at the sight of a man chasing his hat. But when they, or their children, or their grandchildren, become fully civilized, their reaction on seeing a hat chaser dodging bicycles and taxicabs will be to put themselves in his place. And then, of course, the situation no longer appears funny. What man ever enjoyed chasing his own hat?

Your correspondent, realizing the importance of the professor's announcement to the human race, was about to broadcast it to a waiting world. Suddenly, came a staggering idea. "Suppose," said we to ourself, "suppose you did not understand the professor's theory—which is undoubtedly the case—would you be overcome with laughter? Not at all. But suppose you understood that he was only trying to be funny, then you would laugh." Unfortunately, this contribution to the theory proved only one thing, namely, that humor is a baffling subject. And that has already been demonstrated by half a dozen really learned writers who have published whole books to explain exactly why and how human beings do anything so ridiculous as to laugh.

IS HUMOR CRUDE?

Still, a disturbing thought persisted. Could the famous American sense of humor be a sign of crudeness, another of those 12-year-old mentality tests? And so, the quest of understanding led the eager reporter to seek out some one who would have inside information. The quest led to Mr. Ferrall, who has contributed a humorous essay to the Volta Review every month for the past seven years. The Volta Review is the official magazine for the hard of hearing, and Mr. Ferrall, who is himself deaf, is one of the best known persons in the world of the deafened.

The situation required diplomacy. It is a well known fact that humorists are gloomy and temperamental creatures in their native state. It seemed almost dangerous to approach a humorist with the suggestion that possibly he would rank a good deal lower than the angels—assuming for convenience that the angels represent a sweetly solemn state of high civilization. This humorist, however, was not annoyed. He was amused.

"In the first place," he said whimsically, "it is a mighty unfair world that makes it possible for a professor of philosophy to put out a long range prediction about laughter dying out, and be able to get away with it, whereas poor, hard working humorists must prove their point at once. Either the things they write are funny or they are not. The fact that a joke may be funny 28 million years from now doesn't count. But the philosopher who is that close in his computations is considered as having proved his case. The thing that is dying out in this world is not laughter, but justice."

This speech sounded plausible, and the interviewer jotted it down neatly on his cuff, though dragging in justice merely added to his mental confusion.

Mr. Ferrall, however, proceeded at once to more specific arguments. He pointed out that Dr. Shaw apparently assumes dignity and intelligence to be identical. Many people have believed that laughter is inappropriate to dignity. Lord Chesterfield once wrote: "I am sure that since I had the use of my reason no human being has ever heard me laugh." This would indicate that Lord Chesterfield was a hound for dignity, but not necessarily that he was a grade A human being. And after all, why should it be a significant thing in the history of civilization that a genius or a highly specialized professor has passed beyond the language of smiles. Such people are not representative of what the race is coming to. If they do not know what it is to laugh, they cannot really understand the emotions and interests of a child nor those of a normal, happy person of any age.

IS LAUGHTER NECESSARY?

A specialist in humor would naturally be expected to think that humorous point of view represents an advanced stage of civilization. Mr. Ferrall, reviewing his experiences carefully, did think so.

"From the standpoint of intellectual development," he said, "I feel that if the human race ever attains to the point where it has risen above laughter (in which event it will, of course, no longer be the human race), it will be sufficiently intelligent to appreciate the value of laughter as a mental and physical exercise and so will be led to give it a prominent place in everyday life. That will be the Golden Age of the mirth-maker. The task of the humorist should be simpler then, for the ease with which the superintellectual may be amused is proverbial. If I were called upon to amuse Dr. Einstein, for example, I should proceed on the assumption that his "mirth" age is, say, about six years. Any joke too subtle for the average boy of six would most likely puzzle him as much as his theory of relativity puzzles me.

"One might apply Dr. Shaw's line of reasoning to almost all human emotions. Tears will, of course, be discarded with increasing intelligence. Women will be absolutely independent and so will be free from the necessity of resorting to tears. Besides, men will have nothing to give worth shedding tears over; they will be doing the crying if any is done. We shall shed no tears of sympathy, because we shall know that sorrow and suffering are only mental, and anyway the result of cause and effect. If a person suffers, it is his fault, or somebody's fault."

"It all sounds very remote," suggested the interviewer.

"Oh, my eyes," sighed Mr. Ferrall.

"In the meantime, then, you don't suppose that a semi-facetious article on humor would be a contribution to the downfall of the race?"

"Oh, no," he said.

Shop Early and Avoid the Rush

In conjunction with the "shop early, mail early" appeal of the postoffice department, officials of which have the interest of postal clerks, mail carriers and the salespeople behind the counter at heart as well the expedition of shipment of gifts for distant points, East Liverpool shoppers should heed the suggestion of street car posters to visit the stores from 10 A. M. to 4 P. M. and avoid the rush.

Compliance with the request means that Christmas shoppers will not only get a wider variety and fresher selection of stocks, but they will make it easier on themselves and the salespeople who wait on them.

And, too, they will have more time to make purchases and will co-operate in the movement to relieve the ever-growing traffic congestion which is always at its peak in the holiday season.

Traction companies everywhere are urging shoppers to use the cars during the dull periods of the day, thus they will not be caught in the midst of traffic rushes--periods when the cars are crowded with people who are going to and from work. Cars are always taxed to capacity early in the morning and in the evening, and if a heavy quota of shoppers is added it interferes with schedules.

Shop early and avoid the rush.

Children's Gifts

Many inexperienced parents have joyfully planned for a small child's first Christmas, only to find that the youngster turned away uninterested from beautiful and complicated toys to some simple, inexpensive object—a rag doll or a cotton rabbit or a box with an easily removable lid. Often adoring aunts and uncles bring lavish gifts to little folks who ask for no elaborate aids to happiness.

This is something to keep in mind when doing the Christmas shopping. It is well to suit children's gifts to children's ages. A doll for a child barely out of babyhood should be practically indestructible, light enough to be carried about the house easily, soft enough to be sat upon or taken to bed at nap time with equal comfort and safety. The fascinating doll that opens and closes its eyes, and can be sewed for and dressed and undressed, is fun for the older child.

It is the same with other toys. The very simplest of crude wooden blocks give exactly as much joy to the very small boy as the complicated mechanical or building outfit brings to the older boys.

Children's gifts may be spoiled, but their happiness cannot be increased, by giving them gifts unsuited to their years.

Selected Immigrants

Immigration on a carefully worked out plan is going forward in Canada. Representatives from all the Canadian provinces have recently gone to London to work there with the deputy minister of immigration and colonization in selecting the first thousand families that are to migrate to Canada under the "assisted family settlement" agreement between the Dominion and the British governments.

Under this agreement Canada is to provide good farm land on easy terms of payment, the British government is to furnish funds up to $1,500 per family for equipment, and the Canadian government, through its representatives, is to approve the families sent out.

This approval is given in the mother country before the would-be immigrants leave their native land. Only well qualified applicants will be approved, but once accepted they will be assured suitable farm land to settle upon and all the financial assistance needed at the beginning of their immigration venture.

It is an attractive plan. Many Americans are convinced that the careful selection of immigrants in Europe before they sail for our shores is quite as important in solving Uncle Sam's immigration problem as numerical exclusion. Canada is already practicing what America so far has accepted in theory only.

A "high-brow" may have a low forehead, as psychologists say, but do you ever find a narrow-eyed person with a broad mind?

TODAY

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

(The opinions expressed in this column are strictly those of Mr. Brisbane and not necessarily in consonance with the policies of The Review-Tribune).

WERE CAN MAN BE HAPPY?

A man may find in the lonely cottage, the village, or in the big city of his birth, full opportunity to develop all his powers, to do all the good that is in him, to utilize wisely the uplifting force that we call ambition.

As a general proposition, however, a cultivated and civilized human being, like a cultivated and civilized shade tree, demands occasional transplanting. Man's destiny is to move about on the face of the earth. If he stays in one spot like a tree or a gooseberry bush, he doesn't give himself a full chance.

It is good for the country boy to go into the city. It is good for the city boy to go into the country—it is good for each to study that which he has not seen.

CONTENTED MIND BRINGS HAPPINESS

At his birth a human being is little better than a mass of putty. He is a poor, almost bald, toothless, deaf and blind little creature, unable to do anything for himself. From this "station of his birth," which is a condition of absolute helplessness and uselessness, he may develop to be one of the great men of the world. Or he may stop and pass his life at any one of a million intermediate stations, which is that of physical development and commonplace life.

The force we call ambition is a feeling not only of restlessness and desire for change and achievement, but especially a moral impulse to do good.

We all feel within ourselves a force stirring vaguely, indefinitely. We want to do something, if it is based on desire to be useful to other people, may properly be called ambition.

The successful, ambitious human being is the one that makes the best possible use of his or her powers.

The world is full of perverted emotion, improperly called ambition.

That perverted ambition is selfishness, vanity, baseless egotism that makes us refuse to do useful work that we might do because it does not seem important enough.

AMBITION NOT AN EMOTION

The young girl should be ambitious—in the future and in the present.

As to her future ambitions, she may let her mind roam, as far as she will. If she wants to think of marrying a king, or marrying the little boy around the corner and making a king of him by her influence, let her do so. If she wants to think that she will combine the powers of Rachel, Jenny Lind and Bernhardt—that won't hurt her.

But she must have an ambition right in the present—definite ambition.

She must make up her mind that she will do what she can to be useful in the house where she lives, and to set a good example wherever she may be.

Whatever good there is in small boys is usually based upon their ambition for girls of their own age. Girls should remember that they have an important work to do today in influencing the minds of lads with whom they come in contact, and inspiring in such boys admiration of good character.

The young boy should be ambitious also.

And while he dreams occasionally of being president of the United States, knocking Dempsey senseless, or making the best flying machine, he must have for his present ambition something simpler and more feasible.

If his people are poor, the first ambition he should have is to support himself and help them.

If they are making a sacrifice to give him an education that will help all of them later, the boy's ambition should be to do everything in his work to be worthy of the kindness and the opportunity they are giving him.

Every boy, young man and young woman should have ambition to understand public affairs, and, if possible, to influence them. Power lies in all of the people.

Every boy, girl, young man and woman should study political affairs, understand public questions and be ambitious, in a little or big way, to help make this land a genuine republic, governed in the interests of the people.

POWER LIES IN ALL PEOPLE

It is proper that young men and women should have a reasonable desire to accumulate money. Poverty is slavery.

Only the greatest genius can do real work in the face of poverty—and to do it he must content to endure suffering and humiliation.

Every young man should have a good, honest ambition to make a reasonable fortune, to put himself and those dependent on him beyond the reach of want, beyond the whims of some other human being.

But the making of money should be a secondary ambition. It is, properly speaking, not ambition at all—only a development of the instinct of self-preservation.

Real thought should dwell on the possibility of doing something entirely new which will be of benefit to all of the world—or of doing EXTREMELY WELL something that is necessary.

Encourage your own ambition, nurse it, and mark out a definite course for it.

A man can no more sail through life without a guiding, directing will than a ship can sail across the ocean without a needle pointing in one direction all the time.

You may change your course; you may find as your abilities develop that you must change your plans.

Don't be afraid or ashamed to change the course of your ambition.

But have a plan, and stick to it until you make up your mind that it was wrongly selected.

And, remember, this: No man is worth his salt who does not try to do something that will help others. Everything that we enjoy on this earth—comforts, luxury—we owe to the ambition of unselfish, brave men that lived here before us. Try to be like them, in a big or a little way, and good luck to you.

They chat as nonchalantly about the reigning play as the chronic first nighter and they can discuss the best selling book with amazing knowledge. You see them at 12 years apparently surfeited with all the worldiness usually packed into a life time.

I noticed one the other night ordering from a menu entirely in French. He chose his dishes with all the skill of the accomplished epicure, and instead of obeying the dictum to be seen and not heard, he was quite the life of the party. He did all the talking.

In those restaurants where dancing is permitted, the cafe kiddie does his stuff. And he remains as long as the rest. But here are children who rarely smile. There is none of that buoyant vibrancy that only youth achieves.

Instead there is a pathetic lanquor. Their life is a round of tutors and well bred conversational blah. Not to have been chased from a watermelon patch or to have dug a cave in the banks of the creek means just one thing. They have not lived.

The famous Palais Royal where Paul Whiteman's jazz band made its first world wide bid for fame is doing a rushing business as a chop suey joint. This makes the fifteenth Chinese restaurant to open between Herald square and Columbus circle since Broadway went, practically speaking, dry.

Several years ago "Bud" Fisher, the cartoonist, was employed on a New York morning newspaper. He received a bigger offer from another paper and asked to be released from his contract, but was refused. Several days later he was in the art room and an Efficient Eustace came snooping in to see what was going on. "Bud" was smoking a cigarette.

"Smoking is not permitted here!" said the efficiency expert.

"What will happen if I smoke?" asked the cartoonist.

"You will be dismissed."

"Fine. I'll be here at 2 o'clock with three packages of cigarettes to be lighted one after another and if you'll fire me, I'll have $10,000 in cash to hand over to you."

Fisher was there—but the efficiency expert was not.

Along Park Row there is a seedy looking fellow who often steps out of shadows at night to greet newspapermen and ask for the loan of small change. Three years ago he was one of the star men and prosperous. But he happened to be one of the very few who have betrayed their calling. He fostered a fake story that embarrassed his paper—and now he is paying the penalty.

IS HUMOR DYING OUT?

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—"The American sense of humor is not imperiled," was the reassuring statement issued late last evening by John A. Ferrall, specialist in humorous affairs.

The reason for this statement was that your correspondent had been viewing with great alarm rumors that laughter was becoming defunct. Dr. Charles G. Shaw, professor of philosophy at New York university, has aroused the country by prophesying the death of laughter. His exhaustive researches on the subject led him inevitably to the following conclusion: People laugh at what they do not understand. Civilization promotes understanding. Therefore, by all the rules of algebra, the more civilized we become, the less we shall laugh.

To illustrate his theory, the doctor refers us to prof. Einstein, who sees nothing humorous in relativity nor in anything else, and to Trotzky and Mahatma Ghandi, who have almost attained to the same state of imperturbable poise and understanding.

There are many persons still alive who giggle with simple pleasure at the sight of a man chasing his hat. But when they, or their children, or their grandchildren, become fully civilized, their reaction on seeing a hat chaser dodging bicycles and taxicabs will be to put themselves in his place. And then, of course, the situation no longer appears funny. What man ever enjoyed chasing his own hat?

Your correspondent, realizing the importance of the professor's announcement to the human race, was about to broadcast it to a waiting world. Suddenly, came a staggering idea. "Suppose," said we to ourself, "suppose you did not understand the professor's theory—which is undoubtedly the case—would you be overcome with laughter? Not at all. But suppose you understood that he was only trying to be funny, then you would laugh." Unfortunately, this contribution to the theory proved only one thing, namely, that humor is a baffling subject. And that has already been demonstrated by half a dozen really learned writers who have published whole books to explain exactly why and how human beings do anything so ridiculous as to laugh.

IS HUMOR CRUDE?

Still, a disturbing thought persisted. Could the famous American sense of humor be a sign of crudeness, another of those 12-year-old mentality tests? And so, the quest of understanding led the eager reporter to seek out some one who would have inside information. The quest led to Mr. Ferrall, who has contributed a humorous essay to the Volta Review every month for the past seven years. The Volta Review is the official magazine for the hard of hearing, and Mr. Ferrall, who is himself deaf, is one of the best known persons in the world of the deafened.

The situation required diplomacy. It is a well known fact that humorists are gloomy and temperamental creatures in their native state. It seemed almost dangerous to approach a humorist with the suggestion that possibly he would rank a good deal lower than the angels—assuming for convenience that the angels represent a sweetly solemn state of high civilization. This humorist, however, was not annoyed. He was amused.

"In the first place," he said whimsically, "it is a mighty unfair world that makes it possible for a professor of philosophy to put out a long range prediction about laughter dying out, and be able to get away with it, whereas poor, hard working humorists must prove their point at once. Either the things they write are funny or they are not. The fact that a joke may be funny 28 million years from now doesn't count. But the philosopher who is that close in his computations is considered as having proved his case. The thing that is dying out in this world is not laughter, but justice."

This speech sounded plausible, and the interviewer jotted it down neatly on his cuff, though dragging in justice merely added to his mental confusion.

Mr. Ferrall, however, proceeded at once to more specific arguments. He pointed out that Dr. Shaw apparently assumes dignity and intelligence to be identical. Many people have believed that laughter is inappropriate to dignity. Lord Chesterfield once wrote: "I am sure that since I had the use of my reason no human being has ever heard me laugh." This would indicate that Lord Chesterfield was a hound for dignity, but not necessarily that he was a grade A human being. And after all, why should it be a significant thing in the history of civilization that a genius or a highly specialized professor has passed beyond the language of smiles. Such people are not representative of what the race is coming to. If they do not know what it is to laugh, they cannot really understand the emotions and interests of a child nor those of a normal, happy person of any age.

IS LAUGHTER NECESSARY?

A specialist in humor would naturally be expected to think that humorous point of view represents an advanced stage of civilization. Mr. Ferrall, reviewing his experiences carefully, did think so.

"From the standpoint of intellectual development," he said, "I feel that if the human race ever attains to the point where it has risen above laughter (in which event it will, of course, no longer be the human race), it will be sufficiently intelligent to appreciate the value of laughter as a mental and physical exercise and so will be led to give it a prominent place in everyday life. That will be the Golden Age of the mirth-maker. The task of the humorist should be simpler then, for the ease with which the superintellectual may be amused is proverbial. If I were called upon to amuse Dr. Einstein, for example, I should proceed on the assumption that his "mirth" age is, say, about six years. Any joke too subtle for the average boy of six would most likely puzzle him as much as his theory of relativity puzzles me.

"One might apply Dr. Shaw's line of reasoning to almost all human emotions. Tears will, of course, be discarded with increasing intelligence. Women will be absolutely independent and so will be free from the necessity of resorting to tears. Besides, men will have nothing to give worth shedding tears over; they will be doing the crying if any is done. We shall shed no tears of sympathy, because we shall know that sorrow and suffering are only mental, and anyway the result of cause and effect. If a person suffers, it is his fault, or somebody's fault."

"It all sounds very remote," suggested the interviewer.

"Oh, my eyes," sighed Mr. Ferrall.

"In the meantime, then, you don't suppose that a semi-facetious article on humor would be a contribution to the downfall of the race?"

"Oh, no," he said.

Shop Early and Avoid the Rush

In conjunction with the "shop early, mail early" appeal of the postoffice department, officials of which have the interest of postal clerks, mail carriers and the salespeople behind the counter at heart as well the expedition of shipment of gifts for distant points, East Liverpool shoppers should heed the suggestion of street car posters to visit the stores from 10 A. M. to 4 P. M. and avoid the rush.

Compliance with the request means that Christmas shoppers will not only get a wider variety and fresher selection of stocks, but they will make it easier on themselves and the salespeople who wait on them.

And, too, they will have more time to make purchases and will co-operate in the movement to relieve the ever-growing traffic congestion which is always at its peak in the holiday season.

Traction companies everywhere are urging shoppers to use the cars during the dull periods of the day, thus they will not be caught in the midst of traffic rushes--periods when the cars are crowded with people who are going to and from work. Cars are always taxed to capacity early in the morning and in the evening, and if a heavy quota of shoppers is added it interferes with schedules.

Shop early and avoid the rush.

Children's Gifts

Many inexperienced parents have joyfully planned for a small child's first Christmas, only to find that the youngster turned away uninterested from beautiful and complicated toys to some simple, inexpensive object—a rag doll or a cotton rabbit or a box with an easily removable lid. Often adoring aunts and uncles bring lavish gifts to little folks who ask for no elaborate aids to happiness.

This is something to keep in mind when doing the Christmas shopping. It is well to suit children's gifts to children's ages. A doll for a child barely out of babyhood should be practically indestructible, light enough to be carried about the house easily, soft enough to be sat upon or taken to bed at nap time with equal comfort and safety. The fascinating doll that opens and closes its eyes, and can be sewed for and dressed and undressed, is fun for the older child.

It is the same with other toys. The very simplest of crude wooden blocks give exactly as much joy to the very small boy as the complicated mechanical or building outfit brings to the older boys.

Children's gifts may be spoiled, but their happiness cannot be increased, by giving them gifts unsuited to their years.

Selected Immigrants

Immigration on a carefully worked out plan is going forward in Canada. Representatives from all the Canadian provinces have recently gone to London to work there with the deputy minister of immigration and colonization in selecting the first thousand families that are to migrate to Canada under the "assisted family settlement" agreement between the Dominion and the British governments.

Under this agreement Canada is to provide good farm land on easy terms of payment, the British government is to furnish funds up to $1,500 per family for equipment, and the Canadian government, through its representatives, is to approve the families sent out.

This approval is given in the mother country before the would-be immigrants leave their native land. Only well qualified applicants will be approved, but once accepted they will be assured suitable farm land to settle upon and all the financial assistance needed at the beginning of their immigration venture.

It is an attractive plan. Many Americans are convinced that the careful selection of immigrants in Europe before they sail for our shores is quite as important in solving Uncle Sam's immigration problem as numerical exclusion. Canada is already practicing what America so far has accepted in theory only.

A "high-brow" may have a low forehead, as psychologists say, but do you ever find a narrow-eyed person with a broad mind?

WERE CAN MAN BE HAPPY?

A man may find in the lonely cottage, the village, or in the big city of his birth, full opportunity to develop all his powers, to do all the good that is in him, to utilize wisely the uplifting force that we call ambition.

As a general proposition, however, a cultivated and civilized human being, like a cultivated and civilized shade tree, demands occasional transplanting. Man's destiny is to move about on the face of the earth. If he stays in one spot like a tree or a gooseberry bush, he doesn't give himself a full chance.

It is good for the country boy to go into the city. It is good for the city boy to go into the country—it is good for each to study that which he has not seen.

CONTENTED MIND BRINGS HAPPINESS

At his birth a human being is little better than a mass of putty. He is a poor, almost bald, toothless, deaf and blind little creature, unable to do anything for himself. From this "station of his birth," which is a condition of absolute helplessness and uselessness, he may develop to be one of the great men of the world. Or he may stop and pass his life at any one of a million intermediate stations, which is that of physical development and commonplace life.

The force we call ambition is a feeling not only of restlessness and desire for change and achievement, but especially a moral impulse to do good.

We all feel within ourselves a force stirring vaguely, indefinitely. We want to do something, if it is based on desire to be useful to other people, may properly be called ambition.

The successful, ambitious human being is the one that makes the best possible use of his or her powers.

The world is full of perverted emotion, improperly called ambition.

That perverted ambition is selfishness, vanity, baseless egotism that makes us refuse to do useful work that we might do because it does not seem important enough.

AMBITION NOT AN EMOTION

The young girl should be ambitious—in the future and in the present.

As to her future ambitions, she may let her mind roam, as far as she will. If she wants to think of marrying a king, or marrying the little boy around the corner and making a king of him by her influence, let her do so. If she wants to think that she will combine the powers of Rachel, Jenny Lind and Bernhardt—that won't hurt her.

But she must have an ambition right in the present—definite ambition.

She must make up her mind that she will do what she can to be useful in the house where she lives, and to set a good example wherever she may be.

Whatever good there is in small boys is usually based upon their ambition for girls of their own age. Girls should remember that they have an important work to do today in influencing the minds of lads with whom they come in contact, and inspiring in such boys admiration of good character.

The young boy should be ambitious also.

And while he dreams occasionally of being president of the United States, knocking Dempsey senseless, or making the best flying machine, he must have for his present ambition something simpler and more feasible.

If his people are poor, the first ambition he should have is to support himself and help them.

If they are making a sacrifice to give him an education that will help all of them later, the boy's ambition should be to do everything in his work to be worthy of the kindness and the opportunity they are giving him.

Every boy, young man and young woman should have ambition to understand public affairs, and, if possible, to influence them. Power lies in all of the people.

Every boy, girl, young man and woman should study political affairs, understand public questions and be ambitious, in a little or big way, to help make this land a genuine republic, governed in the interests of the people.

POWER LIES IN ALL PEOPLE

It is proper that young men and women should have a reasonable desire to accumulate money. Poverty is slavery.

Only the greatest genius can do real work in the face of poverty—and to do it he must content to endure suffering and humiliation.

Every young man should have a good, honest ambition to make a reasonable fortune, to put himself and those dependent on him beyond the reach of want, beyond the whims of some other human being.

But the making of money should be a secondary ambition. It is, properly speaking, not ambition at all—only a development of the instinct of self-preservation.

Real thought should dwell on the possibility of doing something entirely new which will be of benefit to all of the world—or of doing EXTREMELY WELL something that is necessary.

Encourage your own ambition, nurse it, and mark out a definite course for it.

A man can no more sail through life without a guiding, directing will than a ship can sail across the ocean without a needle pointing in one direction all the time.

You may change your course; you may find as your abilities develop that you must change your plans.

Don't be afraid or ashamed to change the course of your ambition.

But have a plan, and stick to it until you make up your mind that it was wrongly selected.

And, remember, this: No man is worth his salt who does not try to do something that will help others. Everything that we enjoy on this earth—comforts, luxury—we owe to the ambition of unselfish, brave men that lived here before us. Try to be like them, in a big or a little way, and good luck to you.

DINNER STORIES

"How's your baby getting on?" asked Green. "Can he talk yet?"

"No, he's only beginning to," replied Black.

"He's a bit backward, surely," said Green. "He's older than ours and ours can talk splendidly."

"Well, ours can walk across the room without being held," countered the other.

"My dear chap, ours toddles down the street to meet me every evening. How about your baby's teeth?"

"Well, he's got a few."

"Ours has got them all but three and he's—"

Here he was interrupted by the exasperated Black. "I say," he exclaimed, "does yours use a safety razor or an ordinary one?"

Two Scots were playing a match at golf and were getting over the course slowly. At length one said: "Man, Sandy, do ye no think we migeht speed up a wee bit? The two players behind us will be gettin' exasperated and drivin' intae us."

"Nae fear o' that," chuckled Sandy; "one o' them is own' me 10 shillins."

NEWSY GOSSIP OF BIG CITIES

By FRANK E. MASON.

PARIS, Dec. 13.—American heiresses seeking titled husbands will desert Paris for other marital hunting grounds if a project of the Harriet government abolishing titles is made a law by the French chambers.

The proposed act of parliament will make it a serious offense, punishable by a heavy fine for government or municipal officials to mention with the name of any French citizen on official records. Lists of army officers, court records, tax tolls and municipal records will call "His Highness, Prince Murat," just plain Monsieur Murat."

Le Quotidien, a staunch supporter of the Herriot government, considers the bill hard on American heiresses. "As an example of the practical application of the measure," explains Le Quotidien, "the mayor in signing the marriage certificate of Count Roquestebouil de Montgradail with Miss Swineherd, of Chicago, daughter of the well-known millionaire pork packer, will write only 'Monsieur Roquestebouil de Montgradail' and 'Miss Swineherd.'

"Although she may call herself 'Madame la Comtesse' as much as she pleases in her own salon, Miss Swinherd will never be a countess in the eyes of the French law."

Quoting Count Royer's work to prove that more than 25,000 claims to nobility in France are absolutely unfounded as far as nobility of "race" is concerned, Le Quotidien recalls the tremendous increase in the hanks of nobility in the last century.

"Napoleon created nine princes, 32 dukes, 388 counts, 1,090 barons. The restoration made 17 dukes, 70 marquis, 83 counts, 62 viscounts, 215 barons and 785 letters of nobility. The July government created three dukes, 19 counts, 17 viscounts and 59 barons. And finally Napoleon II rewarded his faithful by making 12 dukes, 19 counts and viscounts and 21 barons.

The Latin Quarter days of romance of Trilbys and Mimis, when students were regular devils with a glass of beer and whose worst vices were love affairs, have become legends of the past, fallen before the drug needle and the cocaine peddler, reveals "Comoedia" in an article which has shocked blase Paris.

"The Sorbonne students are a cosmopolitan society where one meets 20 different races. Some are studious, others are not," says Comoedia. "If the student body is sincere it must admit that cocaine—sold by poor medical students who thus earn their living to continue their studies—has made terrible ravages in the student quarter.

"We can cite the case of a young co-ed, initiated into the drug habit by a friend in the medical college. Suffering excruciating pain, subject to erotic hallucinations she has been taken away to a sanitarium to die."

Comoedia goes on to name student cafes where drug peddlers work unrestricted by the authorities.

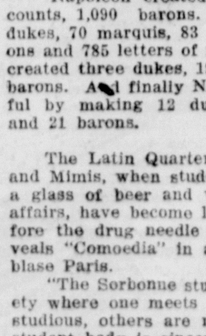

"Poor Latin Quarter, so fallen, so ignorant, so weak! Here, in the midst of the vulgar debauchery, disastrous for young intellects, cocaine may work its ravages unrestrained. One is compelled to demand in consternation why the students' associations haven't yet taken the initiative for a counter-offensive, since the police, informed of the progress of the drug evil, are asleep, waiting until it is too late to act."

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—This is the day of the "cafe kiddie." You see him these days in almost every public restaurant, resembling the stage dwarf, and dressed in dinner clothes with all the up-to-date trappings, including a boutonniere.

Bringing children to cafes is one of the fads since prohibition. Parents feel he is safe from the frivolities that liquor sometimes engenders. And so he sits with them immaculately starched and primped, smooth and self-assured.

They are the children from whom few thrills are left. They know New York, Paris, London, The Riviera and Palm Beach. They would laugh at the idea of playing with toys. The mysteries of the haymow, the stone bruise and barefoot pleasures are denied them.

They chat as nonchalantly about the reigning play as the chronic first nighter and they can discuss the best selling book with amazing knowledge. You see them at 12 years apparently surfeited with all the worldiness usually packed into a life time.

If they do not know what it is to laugh, they cannot really understand the emotions and interests of a child nor those of a normal, happy person of any age.

IS LAUGHTER NECESSARY?

A specialist in humor would naturally be expected to think that humorous point of view represents an advanced stage of civilization. Mr. Ferrall, reviewing his experiences carefully, did think so.

"From the standpoint of intellectual development," he said, "I feel that if the human race ever attains to the point where it has risen above laughter (in which event it will, of course, no longer be the human race), it will be sufficiently intelligent to appreciate the value of laughter as a mental and physical exercise and so will be led to give it a prominent place in everyday life. That will be the Golden Age of the mirth-maker. The task of the humorist should be simpler then, for the ease with which the superintellectual may be amused is proverbial. If I were called upon to amuse Dr. Einstein, for example, I should proceed on the assumption that his "mirth" age is, say, about six years. Any joke too subtle for the average boy of six would most likely puzzle him as much as his theory of relativity puzzles me.

"One might apply Dr. Shaw's line of reasoning to almost all human emotions. Tears will, of course, be discarded with increasing intelligence. Women will be absolutely independent and so will be free from the necessity of resorting to tears. Besides, men will have nothing to give worth shedding tears over; they will be doing the crying if any is done. We shall shed no tears of sympathy, because we shall know that sorrow and suffering are only mental, and anyway the result of cause and effect. If a person suffers, it is his fault, or somebody's fault."

"It all sounds very remote," suggested the interviewer.

"Oh, my eyes," sighed Mr. Ferrall.

"In the meantime, then, you don't suppose that a semi-facetious article on humor would be a contribution to the downfall of the race?"

"Oh, no," he said.

So here it is.

Mrs. M. A. Madill, of East Fifth street, left today for Los Angeles, Cal., to spend the winter.

A son has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Buckley, of Wall street.

A 10-pound son was born Wednesday to Mr. and Mrs. Dewitt Irwin, of Bradshaw avenue.

Edwin Wells, of Newell Heights, is planning to enter Yale college next year. He is now preparing at Bethany college, having graduated from the local high school with the class of 1909. Joseph Wells, a brother, is now a third-year student at Yale.

SAFETY MEET IS SCHEDULED

State Auto Club Heads to Discuss Plans With Morgan

Governor E. F. Morgan, of West Virginia, has sponsored a safety conference of all the automobile clubs included in the west Virginia State Automobile association to meet in Charleston on Wednesday, Dec. 17. Acting upon the recommendation of the governor, C. E. Morgan, president of the state association, has named a committee composed of the presidents of the various municipal auto clubs to meet in the conference and discuss important safety measures regarding accident prevention in the state.

Perhaps the most important feature of the safety measures to be discussed by the auto heads is the proposed Stop-look and Listen law, which has a strong backing in the state. This measure has been advanced for enactment in West Virginia to aid in reducing the toll of traffic accidents. This law would require motorists to come to a full stop at railroad grade crossings and street intersections alike

The question of compulsory liability insurance for state motorists will come in for its share of discussion at the conference. This means has been advanced by many traffic authorities as a suitable solution of the safety problem which confronts motorists at all times. Other important measures will be advanced by the representatives with a view of arriving at some definite conclusion as to the most practicable means of combating the accident toll, that annually exacts its payment in the lives and permanent injury of hundreds of motorists.

ONLY 8,371 AUTO LICENSES ISSUED

Probability that many automobile owners in West Virginia would be unable during the first part of January to use their automobiles because of waiting to the last minute to apply for 1925 license plates, was forecast by C. E. Hiner, member of the state road commission, in a statement yesterday announcing that as yet, only 8,371 licenses had been issued. This compares with more than 167,000 automobile licenses in 1924. The plates have been available for some time and no extension of time will be granted before their use will be required, Mr. Hiner warned.

At the same time he announced that police officers had been asked to honor 1924 Michigan licenses, because that state was unable to issue its 1925 plates on account of a court action now pending.

PRISONERS MAKE ESCAPE FROM JAIL

Breaking a lock with an iron bar, Grant Crites, 23, and Glen Crites, 21, both of Ritchwood, charged with shoplifting in Clarksburg and Richwood stores, made their escape from the Clarksburg city jail last evening, making the second jail delivery within 24 hours.

Okey Stalnaker, 21, broke out of the jail by ripping up the floor of his cell with an iron bar taken from his bed and dropping through a hole in the floor below. Stalnaker was arrested following a confession said to have been made by the Crites boys, implicating him in robberies of local stores.

WOMAN'S CLUB TO ASSEMBLE MONDAY

Members of the Chester Woman's club will meet Monday afternoon with Mrs. R. B. Smith at her home in Phoenix avenue. Mrs. S. A. Stewart will have a paper entitled "Bible Stories in Opera and Oratorio." Mrs. C. A. Boyce will have as her topic "Drama of Bible Story." Roll call will be answered by quotations on "Favorite Promise."

SUNDAY SERVICES AT USUAL HOURS

Services will be held in the churches here tomorrow morning and evening at the usual hours. Sermons will be delivered by the pastors. Plans are being perfected for the annual Christmas entertainments which will be given in a majority of the churches next Sunday evening. Final rehearsals will be held during the coming week by choirs and Sunday school members.

Kokomo Inquires About 'Toy, China Ware Importer' Here

Chamber of Commerce in Indiana City Seeks Information Regarding J. G. Lauer, Claiming East Liverpool as Headquarters.

The Chamber of Commerce today received a communication from the Chamber of Commerce, of Kokomo, Ind., inquiring about J. G. Lauer, claiming to be a "manufacturer and importer of toys, china ware and enamelware," who is alleged to have swindled a Kokomo merchant out of $10 on an order of merchandise recently.

Laurer, the message says, claimed to maintain his headquarters in East Liverpool. Upon his recent visit to Kokomo, he was given $10 on deposit, with the agreement that the balance of $14 was to be paid upon delivery of the merchandise. Since then nothing has been heard of Lauer or the merchandise.

Lauer is believed to be the same man who operated under the name of P. G. Lauer, in Cincinnati, about a year ago and concerning whom the Chamber received a report. In Cincinnati, the solicitor claimed to be the son of J. G. Lauer, who mantains an establishment in Pittsburgh. Officers of the Pittsburgh company denied any knowledge of the salesman who appeared in Cincinnati. He carried letterheads showing that the company maintained offices in both Pittsburgh and East Liverpool.

Secretary H. B. Barth will refer the letter to the National Vigilance committee.

REV. O. H. RITCHIE TO FILL PULPIT

Rev. Orland H. Ritchie, pastor of the Seventh United Presbyterian church of Pittsburgh, Pa., will preach at the morning and evening services tomorrow at the First United Presbyterian church. Rev. Ritchie was a classmate of Rev. Thomas H. Newcomb, pastor of the local church, during their seminary days.

Slight Blaze.

Slight fire occurred last evening at the home of Alvah Mackall in Phoenix avenue. The blaze started in the chimney flue but was easily extinguished. The loss was trifling.

Holding Food Sale.

CARD OF THANKS.

We desire to thank our friends and neighbors for the kindness, sympathy and beautiful floral offerings during our recent bereavement in the death of our wife and mother, Mrs. Emma J. Evans.

We especially thank the Rev. B. R. Johnson, the quartet of the First Church of Christ, the Standard Pottery Co., and the Homer Laughlin No. 6, plant and also the good friends and neighbors who were so kind during our sorrow.

VERSE AND WORSE

By Larry Flint

An Everyday Sermon.

Life ain't whut yuh git, my boy;
it's only whut yuh give—
Helpin' other folks t' smile an' helpin' people live
Jest a little better cuz they met yuh on the road;
Puttin' o' yer shoulder t' th' other feller's load.
Are th' bit o'laughter an' o' love yuh give away.
Gittin' things can't bring you joy in any large amount;
Lots yuh got thet other folks would like a heap t' own
Things thet two kin thrive on but yuh can't enjoy alone,
Ain't no way o' tellin' how they make a lonely mile
Shorten an' grow beautiful t' him tthet plods along
Yearning fer a handshake er a bit o' liltin song.
There's a lot o' rules, my lad, but jest one way t' live;
Life ain't whut yuh git, my boy; it's only whut yuh give.

The Chamber of Commerce today received a communication from the Chamber of Commerce, of Kokomo, Ind., inquiring about J. G. Lauer, claiming to be a "manufacturer and importer of toys, china ware and enamelware," who is alleged to have swindled a Kokomo merchant out of $10 on an order of merchandise recently.

Laurer, the message says, claimed to maintain his headquarters in East Liverpool. Upon his recent visit to Kokomo, he was given $10 on deposit, with the agreement that the balance of $14 was to be paid upon delivery of the merchandise. Since then nothing has been heard of Lauer or the merchandise.

Lauer is believed to be the same man who operated under the name of P. G. Lauer, in Cincinnati, about a year ago and concerning whom the Chamber received a report. In Cincinnati, the solicitor claimed to be the son of J. G. Lauer, who mantains an establishment in Pittsburgh. Officers of the Pittsburgh company denied any knowledge of the salesman who appeared in Cincinnati. He carried letterheads showing that the company maintained offices in both Pittsburgh and East Liverpool.

Secretary H. B. Barth will refer the letter to the National Vigilance committee.

REV. O. H. RITCHIE TO FILL PULPIT

Rev. Orland H. Ritchie, pastor of the Seventh United Presbyterian church of Pittsburgh, Pa., will preach at the morning and evening services tomorrow at the First United Presbyterian church. Rev. Ritchie was a classmate of Rev. Thomas H. Newcomb, pastor of the local church, during their seminary days.

Slight Blaze.

Slight fire occurred last evening at the home of Alvah Mackall in Phoenix avenue. The blaze started in the chimney flue but was easily extinguished. The loss was trifling.

Holding Food Sale.

CARD OF THANKS.

We desire to thank our friends and neighbors for the kindness, sympathy and beautiful floral offerings during our recent bereavement in the death of our wife and mother, Mrs. Emma J. Evans.

We especially thank the Rev. B. R. Johnson, the quartet of the First Church of Christ, the Standard Pottery Co., and the Homer Laughlin No. 6, plant and also the good friends and neighbors who were so kind during our sorrow.

VERSE AND WORSE

By Larry Flint

An Everyday Sermon.

Life ain't whut yuh git, my boy;
it's only whut yuh give—
Helpin' other folks t' smile an' helpin' people live
Jest a little better cuz they met yuh on the road;
Puttin' o' yer shoulder t' th' other feller's load.
Are th' bit o'laughter an' o' love yuh give away.

Gittin' things can't bring you joy in any large amount;
Things thet two kin thrive on but yuh can't enjoy alone,
Ain't no way o' tellin' how they make a lonely mile
Shorten an' grow beautiful t' him tthet plods along
Yearning fer a handshake er a bit o' liltin song.
There's a lot o' rules, my lad, but jest one way t' live;

SAFETY MEET IS SCHEDULED

State Auto Club Heads to Discuss Plans With Morgan

Governor E. F. Morgan, of West Virginia, has sponsored a safety conference of all the automobile clubs included in the west Virginia State Automobile association to meet in Charleston on Wednesday, Dec. 17. Acting upon the recommendation of the governor, C. E. Morgan, president of the state association, has named a committee composed of the presidents of the various municipal auto clubs to meet in the conference and discuss important safety measures regarding accident prevention in the state.

Perhaps the most important feature of the safety measures to be discussed by the auto heads is the proposed Stop-look and Listen law, which has a strong backing in the state. This measure has been advanced for enactment in West Virginia to aid in reducing the toll of traffic accidents. This law would require motorists to come to a full stop at railroad grade crossings and street intersections alike

The question of compulsory liability insurance for state motorists will come in for its share of discussion at the conference. This means has been advanced by many traffic authorities as a suitable solution of the safety problem which confronts motorists at all times. Other important measures will be advanced by the representatives with a view of arriving at some definite conclusion as to the most practicable means of combating the accident toll, that annually exacts its payment in the lives and permanent injury of hundreds of motorists.

ONLY 8,371 AUTO LICENSES ISSUED

Probability that many automobile owners in West Virginia would be unable during the first part of January to use their automobiles because of waiting to the last minute to apply for 1925 license plates, was forecast by C. E. Hiner, member of the state road commission, in a statement yesterday announcing that as yet, only 8,371 licenses had been issued. This compares with more than 167,000 automobile licenses in 1924. The plates have been available for some time and no extension of time will be granted before their use will be required, Mr. Hiner warned.

At the same time he announced that police officers had been asked to honor 1924 Michigan licenses, because that state was unable to issue its 1925 plates on account of a court action now pending.

PRISONERS MAKE ESCAPE FROM JAIL

Breaking a lock with an iron bar, Grant Crites, 23, and Glen Crites, 21, both of Ritchwood, charged with shoplifting in Clarksburg and Richwood stores, made their escape from the Clarksburg city jail last evening, making the second jail delivery within 24 hours.

Okey Stalnaker, 21, broke out of the jail by ripping up the floor of his cell with an iron bar taken from his bed and dropping through a hole in the floor below. Stalnaker was arrested following a confession said to have been made by the Crites boys, implicating him in robberies of local stores.

HOME TRAINING

A Good Soldier.

A World War soldier of the Naval Reserves, New London, Conn., was in a hospital facing death when his father visited him. He had come to manhood by the way of a Christian home and was now enlarging his Christian hope.

"Have I been a good soldier?" said he, looking into his father's face. His father bowed by his bedside in prayer using in closing the Lord's Prayer, and as he prayed "For thine is the kingdom, and the power and the glory," he whispered his last words, "Glorious victory."

His body was taken to Duluth and buried with military honors. In planning the funeral service the father said to the pastor, "We are a Christian family and have a Christian hope. We feel deeply the loss of this dear boy, but because of his own expression of faith and confidence in God and the assurance of seeing him again, I want you to ask the people who are assembled to unite with us in singing the doxology at the close."

The minister read words of comfort and told of the Christian home that had laid this choice gift on the altar of the country and the triumphant closing of a real soldier's life.

When the request was made that the congregation join in singing "Praise God from whom all blessings flow" there was a hearty response—all feeling the appropriateness of the doxology for such a good soldier.

Why Your Light Bill Gets Higher in the Fall

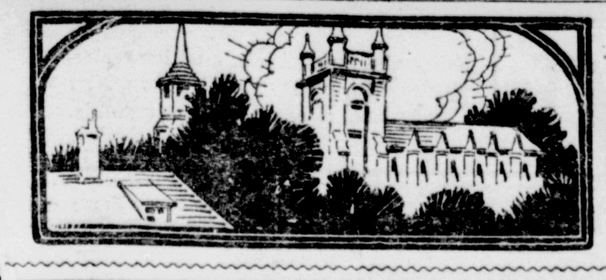

Glance at this chart and you'll see that in July you used electric light only a couple of hours in the evening. It didn't get dark until 8 o'clock and you spent most of the evening out in the car anyway.

But as the nights get longer and books and lamp light are more alluring than frosty country roads, the hours when the electric light is needed increase until the peak is reached in December. You're on the up-swing of the chart now—that's why your light bill may have seemed higher last month. But after all, electricity is the cheapest convenience in your home.

HOME TRAINING

A Good Soldier.

A World War soldier of the Naval Reserves, New London, Conn., was in a hospital facing death when his father visited him. He had come to manhood by the way of a Christian home and was now enlarging his Christian hope.

"Have I been a good soldier?" said he, looking into his father's face. His father bowed by his bedside in prayer using in closing the Lord's Prayer, and as he prayed "For thine is the kingdom, and the power and the glory," he whispered his last words, "Glorious victory."

His body was taken to Duluth and buried with military honors. In planning the funeral service the father said to the pastor, "We are a Christian family and have a Christian hope. We feel deeply the loss of this dear boy, but because of his own expression of faith and confidence in God and the assurance of seeing him again, I want you to ask the people who are assembled to unite with us in singing the doxology at the close."

The minister read words of comfort and told of the Christian home that had laid this choice gift on the altar of the country and the triumphant closing of a real soldier's life.

When the request was made that the congregation join in singing "Praise God from whom all blessings flow" there was a hearty response—all feeling the appropriateness of the doxology for such a good soldier.

CHURCH ITEMS FROM WORLD

WORLD RELIGIOUS NEWS.

In California the attorney general forbids the use of the Lord's prayer in the public schools.

The annual report of the Congregational churches in the United States shows a notable tendency toward "fewer churches, but better."

The world's longest Cradle Roll is said to be in the Baptist Church of the Open Door, Los Angeles, California. A paid worker and 50 volunteer unpaid assistants have brought the enrollment to 3,454.

A conference held at Jerusalem on the Moslem situation brought out the fact that there are unmistakable signs of the disintegration of Islam. Every government except Turkey is more open to Christianity than five years ago.

Under the administration of the new president of France, Gaston Doumergue, who is a Protestant and the first one to occupy that position, it is reported that France will discontinue diplomatic negotiations with the vatican at Rome and will recall its ambassador to the "Holy See."

At a recent international meeting of Boy Scouts in Europe the American boys gave a good account of themselves. Competing with troups of 30 nations, they are said to have won first place in camp construction, first aid and canoeing contests.

In the permanent funds for the relief of their aged ministers, Northern Baptists have $11,000,000, Congregationalists $9,000,000, Presbyterians $9,000,000, the Protestant Episcopal church $16,000,000 and the Methodist Episcopal church $17,000,000.

Cannibalism is out of style in Africa. It has been outlawed by the governments and just now in the Congo there are 40 cannibals engaged in building a church. They are prisoners for the crime of eating human flesh and their chief, who wanted a church in his territory, put these wild men to work on it.

It may be surprising to learn that China and Japan rival the United States in the number of volumes of Scriptures circulated annually. The total circulated in 1923 by the American Bible Society in those countries was 2,868,605, as against 2,395,000 in the United States. The increase in the Orient was 30 per cent over the preceding year.

The United Lutheran church at its recent convention voted that Christians should labor through some agency for the promotion of international good-will, but that they may properly engage in "just" or defensive wars. A number of delegates, however, signed a statement dissenting from the decision on the ground that it laid too much emphasis on the supposed "right" to fight.

Things to Know About Our Service

Why Your Light Bill Gets Higher in the Fall

Glance at this chart and you'll see that in July you used electric light only a couple of hours in the evening. It didn't get dark until 8 o'clock and you spent most of the evening out in the car anyway.

But as the nights get longer and books and lamp light are more alluring than frosty country roads, the hours when the electric light is needed increase until the peak is reached in December. You're on the up-swing of the chart now—that's why your light bill may have seemed higher last month. But after all, electricity is the cheapest convenience in your home.

DIVORCE CASES HEARD BY COURT

Six Decrees Issued by Judge Moore During Busy Session.

Mrs. Cora M. McCune, of East Liverpool, was the first to present her claim for a divorce to Judge Moore during a busy divorce session on Friday. At the conclusion of the hearing she was granted a legal separation from James McCune because of gross neglect of duty and absence, and the custody of her two children, Clara and Helen, aged 17 and 12 years, was granted to her. When McCune was last heard from he was at Bens Run, W. Va.

Walter Hendrickson, of East Liverpool, was divorced from Marian Hendrickson, who is now living in Elyria. They were married in Elyria on March 4, 1916, and no children have been born to them. The divorce was granted because of wilful absence.

Charles A. Whitacre, of East Liverpool, told the court that his wife, Helen M. Whitacre, absolutely refused to live in East Liverpool and returned to her home in New York, after having spent the greater part of her time there from the time of their marriage in the fall of 1919. Their one child, William J. Whitacre, now four years old, was born in Brooklyn, and soon after his birth they came to East Liverpool to live. She was always discontented, he told the court, and spent the greater part of her time in New York, finally telling him that she would never live with him again. The husband secured the divorce.

Mrs. Pauline Elliott, of East Liverpool, was given a divorce from William Elliott because of neglect of duty and cruelty. The wife was also restored to her former name, Pauline Hoffman. They were married about two years ago, and the wife stated that soon after he lost his position and refused to hunt for another, but compelled her to go to work and support him.

Mrs. Christena M. Bennett, of Wellsville, was divorced from Eugene Bennett because of gross neglect of duty. They were married in New Cumberland about six years ago, and the wife stated that all during her married life she obliged to work. She also accused him of unfaithfulness. On her application Mrs. Bennett was restored to her former name, Christina Burkhart.

Mrs. Jennie Ross, of Salem, was divorced from Dominic Ross, now of Beaver Falls, and she was restored to her former name, Jennie Magnolia. When the court asked her if she ever talked over their troubles with her husband, she answered that she had not because he was deaf and dumb. They were married in Pittsburgh about three years ago, and cruelty and failure to provide a home was charged against the defendant.

COUNTY FARM AGENT NAMED

Floyd Lower Appointed to Succeed Clarence E. Rowland.

The board of directors of the Columbiana County Farm bureau met Thursday afternoon in the office of County Agent C. E. Rowland, city hall, and named Floyd Lower, of Stark county, to succeed County Agent Rowland on January 1.

Mr. Rowland, who has served the farm bureau as county agent for the past five years, tendered his resignation several weeks ago to accept a like position in Lorain county, with headquarters at Elyria. His resignation here is effective on December 24, but he will not enter upon his new duties until the first of the year.

Mr. Lower comes to Columbiana county highly recommended. He has served the farm bureau of Carroll county as county agent for the past five years.

SALE OF PROPERTY ORDERED BY COURT

Partition was ordered in common pleas court Friday for the real estate located just north of the city building and a small frontage on Jefferson street, and the property will soon be offered at public sale in partition proceedings filed in court some time ago by Mrs. Frank L. Wells, of Wellsville, against William H. Hepburn and the heirs of the late Attorney Willis Jordan, of Lisbon.

Mrs. Wells, as a sister of the late Willis Jordan, is entitled to a one-fourteenth in the property, which was jointly owned by Willis Jordan and W. H. Hepburn, and she wants her interest set off to her. Judge Moore named John H. Hinchliffe, J. F. Adams and C. E. Hamilton to act as commissioners and fix the valuation of the property.

Marriage License.

A marriage license has been issued to Willis B. Dyke, a carpenter of East Palestine, formerly of Negley, and Miss Sarah Veon, a pottery worker at East Palestine. They were married by the Rev. Tompkins, of East Palestine.

Man Seeks Divorce.

Declaring that his wife has been absent from his home for over three years, and that he does not know where she is now residing, J. S. Snyder, through his counsel, W. E. Warren, of Leetonia, has filed an action for divorce against his wife, Jennie Snyder. The couple were married at Columbiana, Nov. 2, 1911.

Sues To Recover.

Claiming their is a balance due him on a farm, Joseph S. Faloon, of Hanoverton, filed an action in common pleas court to collect the amount due and sell the farm in Centre Township, known as the "Salt Farm" north of Lisbon, and now occupied by Dominick Andretta.

Alimony Allowed.

A decree of divorce has been refused in the case of Stella M. Vale against her husband, Lew Vale. However, alimony has been allowed the plaintiff for the support of her minor child, at the rate of $15 per month, the first payment to be made Dec. 15.

Condition Serious.

Ray Haney, who lives near Leetonia, who sustained a most serious brain injury in an automobile accident at the county fair grounds crossing last spring, and who for weeks was in the Salem Clinic hovering between life and death, is again in the hospital in a serious condition as a result of the accident and his recovery is doubtful.

DIVORCE CASES HEARD BY COURT

Six Decrees Issued by Judge Moore During Busy Session.

Mrs. Cora M. McCune, of East Liverpool, was the first to present her claim for a divorce to Judge Moore during a busy divorce session on Friday. At the conclusion of the hearing she was granted a legal separation from James McCune because of gross neglect of duty and absence, and the custody of her two children, Clara and Helen, aged 17 and 12 years, was granted to her. When McCune was last heard from he was at Bens Run, W. Va.

Walter Hendrickson, of East Liverpool, was divorced from Marian Hendrickson, who is now living in Elyria. They were married in Elyria on March 4, 1916, and no children have been born to them. The divorce was granted because of wilful absence.

Charles A. Whitacre, of East Liverpool, told the court that his wife, Helen M. Whitacre, absolutely refused to live in East Liverpool and returned to her home in New York, after having spent the greater part of her time there from the time of their marriage in the fall of 1919. Their one child, William J. Whitacre, now four years old, was born in Brooklyn, and soon after his birth they came to East Liverpool to live. She was always discontented, he told the court, and spent the greater part of her time in New York, finally telling him that she would never live with him again. The husband secured the divorce.

Mrs. Pauline Elliott, of East Liverpool, was given a divorce from William Elliott because of neglect of duty and cruelty. The wife was also restored to her former name, Pauline Hoffman. They were married about two years ago, and the wife stated that soon after he lost his position and refused to hunt for another, but compelled her to go to work and support him.

Mrs. Christena M. Bennett, of Wellsville, was divorced from Eugene Bennett because of gross neglect of duty. They were married in New Cumberland about six years ago, and the wife stated that all during her married life she obliged to work. She also accused him of unfaithfulness. On her application Mrs. Bennett was restored to her former name, Christina Burkhart.

Mrs. Jennie Ross, of Salem, was divorced from Dominic Ross, now of Beaver Falls, and she was restored to her former name, Jennie Magnolia. When the court asked her if she ever talked over their troubles with her husband, she answered that she had not because he was deaf and dumb. They were married in Pittsburgh about three years ago, and cruelty and failure to provide a home was charged against the defendant.

DIVORCE CASES HEARD BY COURT

Six Decrees Issued by Judge Moore During Busy Session.

Mrs. Cora M. McCune, of East Liverpool, was the first to present her claim for a divorce to Judge Moore during a busy divorce session on Friday. At the conclusion of the hearing she was granted a legal separation from James McCune because of gross neglect of duty and absence, and the custody of her two children, Clara and Helen, aged 17 and 12 years, was granted to her. When McCune was last heard from he was at Bens Run, W. Va.

Walter Hendrickson, of East Liverpool, was divorced from Marian Hendrickson, who is now living in Elyria. They were married in Elyria on March 4, 1916, and no children have been born to them. The divorce was granted because of wilful absence.

Charles A. Whitacre, of East Liverpool, told the court that his wife, Helen M. Whitacre, absolutely refused to live in East Liverpool and returned to her home in New York, after having spent the greater part of her time there from the time of their marriage in the fall of 1919. Their one child, William J. Whitacre, now four years old, was born in Brooklyn, and soon after his birth they came to East Liverpool to live. She was always discontented, he told the court, and spent the greater part of her time in New York, finally telling him that she would never live with him again. The husband secured the divorce.

Mrs. Pauline Elliott, of East Liverpool, was given a divorce from William Elliott because of neglect of duty and cruelty. The wife was also restored to her former name, Pauline Hoffman. They were married about two years ago, and the wife stated that soon after he lost his position and refused to hunt for another, but compelled her to go to work and support him.

Mrs. Christena M. Bennett, of Wellsville, was divorced from Eugene Bennett because of gross neglect of duty. They were married in New Cumberland about six years ago, and the wife stated that all during her married life she obliged to work. She also accused him of unfaithfulness. On her application Mrs. Bennett was restored to her former name, Christina Burkhart.

Mrs. Jennie Ross, of Salem, was divorced from Dominic Ross, now of Beaver Falls, and she was restored to her former name, Jennie Magnolia. When the court asked her if she ever talked over their troubles with her husband, she answered that she had not because he was deaf and dumb. They were married in Pittsburgh about three years ago, and cruelty and failure to provide a home was charged against the defendant.

Ceramic Theatre Patrons Laud DeMille's 'Ten Commandments'

De luxe Photoplay, Remarkable in Its Scope, Appeals to Large Audience Thursday Night—Two Presentations Friday and Saturday.

Not in several seasons have theatre-goers accorded a film the attention which they gave "The Ten Commandments" at the Ceramic theatre Thursday and Friday and which will be presented again tonight.

The latest of the Cecil B. DeMille's productions has received more unanimously favorable comment than perhaps any other picture of this producer of masterpieces, and finds both press and pulpit agreed on its merits.

East Liverpool found added interest in the special orchestra which goes with the picture and is under the direction of E. V. Cupero, who has been here before with Neil O'Brian's minstrels. The orchestra's rendition of the difficult score of Hugo Risenfeld could not be unnoticed, thought at times the grandeur of the picture crowded nearly everyhing else into oblivion.

"The Ten Commandments" opens with a prologue depicting the events surrounding the giving of the ten holy ordinances by God to Moses. It records in magnificent scenes, many of which are done in natural colors, the Israelites in Egyptian bondage at the Red Sea with the Egyptian hordes in pursuit, stayed for a time by a wall of fire and later engulfed in the waters of the Red Sea.

It shows in minute detail Moses on the mount at Sinai, where the Ten Commandments appeared to him in the blazing fire of heaven, and of his descent into Israel to find his followers bowed down worshiping the golden calf. It shows the latter destroyed and the subsequent repentance of the tribe.

But "The Ten Commandments" portrays more than merely the events recorded in Biblical history, magnificent and stupendous as they are. The picture comes down to modern times and in a story that none can withstand it shows how those Biblical laws apply to the life of today in a world where evils reign. It shows how retribution exacts its toll upon those who fail to adhere to the basic fundamentals of law as people know it.

The plot is woven around a mother whose two sons possess widely diverging views regarding the Ten Commandments. The one who believes in them remains a poor carpenter. The other who defies their authority and import waxes rich through fradulent means and becomes a wealthy contractor. He has widely varying experiences, yet none that are beyond the bounds of possibility and in no way exaggerated.

"The Ten Commandments" is a great spectacle, packed with incident and with a worth-while story throughout. It is not a starring vehicle for any one actor or actress, though the cast is made up of stars exclusively. These include Theodore Roberts, Charles De Roche, Estelle Taylor, Julia Faye, Terrence Moore, James Neill, Richard Dix, Rod La Roque, Leatrice Joy, Nita Naldi, Robert Edeson, Charles Ogle and Agnes Ayres.

English Alphabet is Old.

Ethelbert, King of Kent ,who became a Christian through the gentle influence of Queen Bertha, was reigning in Britain in 597 when the Anglo-Saxon alphabet was devised from the Roman alphabet. This particular alphabet lasted until 1200, when the Franco-English alphabet took its place and was in use until 1600, when the so-called English alphabet came into existence and lasted materially unchanged until 1787 when further revisions were made. More than 70 per cent of the English language words were of Greco Latin origin.

Raindrops Flat at Ends

Raindrops are not perfectly round. Motion pictures show that, contrary to popular opinion, they are flat at the top and bottom, apparently due to air pressure. The flattening makes each drop comparatively only about half its expected height.

Ceramic Theatre Patrons Laud DeMille's 'Ten Commandments'

De luxe Photoplay, Remarkable in Its Scope, Appeals to Large Audience Thursday Night—Two Presentations Friday and Saturday.

Not in several seasons have theatre-goers accorded a film the attention which they gave "The Ten Commandments" at the Ceramic theatre Thursday and Friday and which will be presented again tonight.

The latest of the Cecil B. DeMille's productions has received more unanimously favorable comment than perhaps any other picture of this producer of masterpieces, and finds both press and pulpit agreed on its merits.

East Liverpool found added interest in the special orchestra which goes with the picture and is under the direction of E. V. Cupero, who has been here before with Neil O'Brian's minstrels. The orchestra's rendition of the difficult score of Hugo Risenfeld could not be unnoticed, thought at times the grandeur of the picture crowded nearly everyhing else into oblivion.

"The Ten Commandments" opens with a prologue depicting the events surrounding the giving of the ten holy ordinances by God to Moses. It records in magnificent scenes, many of which are done in natural colors, the Israelites in Egyptian bondage at the Red Sea with the Egyptian hordes in pursuit, stayed for a time by a wall of fire and later engulfed in the waters of the Red Sea.

It shows in minute detail Moses on the mount at Sinai, where the Ten Commandments appeared to him in the blazing fire of heaven, and of his descent into Israel to find his followers bowed down worshiping the golden calf. It shows the latter destroyed and the subsequent repentance of the tribe.

But "The Ten Commandments," portrays more than merely the events recorded in Biblical history, magnificent and stupendous as they are. The picture comes down to modern times and in a story that none can withstand it shows how those Biblical laws apply to the life of today in a world where evils reign. It shows how retribution exacts its toll upon those who fail to adhere to the basic fundamentals of law as people know it.

The plot is woven around a mother whose two sons possess widely diverging views regarding the Ten Commandments. The one who believes in them remains a poor carpenter. The other who defies their authority and import waxes rich through fraudulent means and becomes a wealthy contractor. He has widely varying experiences, yet none that are beyond the bounds of possibility and in no way exaggerated.

"The Ten Commandments" is a great spectacle, packed with incident and with a worth-while story throughout. It is not a starring vehicle for any one actor or actress, though the cast is made up of stars exclusively. These include Theodore Roberts, Charles De Roche, Estelle Taylor, Julia Faye, Terrence Moore, James Neill, Richard Dix, Rod La Roque, Leatrice Joy, Nita Naldi, Robert Edeson, Charles Ogle and Agnes Ayres.

Answers to Questions

By FREDERICK J. HASKIN.

(Any reader can get the answer to any question by writing The Review-Tribune Information Bureau, Frederic J. Haskin, Director, Washington, D. C. This offer applies strictly to information. The Bureau can not give advice on legal, medical and financial matters. It does not attempt to settled domestic troubles, nor undertake exhaustive research on any subject. Write your question plainly and briefly. Give full name and address and enclose two cents in stamps for return postage. All replies are sent direct to the inquirer.)

Q. What is the record ski jump?—S. C. R.

A. The record for the standing jump in ski jumping is 183 feet held by John Stulich, Ironwood, Michigan, February 24, 1924. (Mountain slide), professional, 229 feet,—made by Harry Hall, Revelstoke, B. C., February 9, 1921. Amateur, Nels Nelson 201 feet at Revelstoke, B. C., February 9, 1921.

Q. What is the difference between a dromedary and a camel?—B. B.

A. Dromedary is a name sometimes given to the Arabian or one-humped camel, but properly belonging to a variety of that species distinguished by slenderness of limbs and symmetry of form and by extraordinary fleetness, "bearing much the same relation to the ordinary camel as a race horse or hunter does to a cart horse."

Q. What was the amount of fire insurance carried in 1923 and the amount of fire loss?—W. D. H.

A. The National Board of Fire Underwriters says that it is estimated that fire losses in the United States during 1923 aggregated about $508,000,000, although its complete tabulations are not yet available. The amount of fire insurance coverage in force is estimated at $127,000,000,000.

Q. I hear that in England, the punctuation of the line "God rest you merry gentlemen," differes from that in use in this country. Can you tell me what change is made?—W. C. P.

A. As we customarily punctuate this familiar line, the comma is placed after "you." A program of a Christmas entertainment given at Cambridge university shows a change in the punctuation and hence in the thought. The comma is placed after "merry."

Q. How many lives were lost in the ZR-2?—J. A. W.

A. The ZR-2 was constructed in England and exploded in a trial flight in August 1921 over England. There were 44 lives lost. The ZR-2 embodied the British idea of rigid airships. It was built by the Royal Airship Works, Pulham, England.

Q. Are there any horses today with ties?—T. H. H.

A. The Smithsonian Institution says that there are no horses living today having two or more toes.

Q. What is the pay of a Colonel in the Regular Army?—C. W.

A. The pay of a Colonel in the Army varies according to the length of service. With less than 26 years' service he receives an annual base pay of $3,500; with over 26 years' service an annual base pay of $4,000.

Q. Does a railroad cross the St. Bernard Pass?—J. L.

A. St. Bernard Pass which is in the Alps in Switzerland is a carriage road and no railroad runs on this Pass or across it.

Q. Where is the replica of the first ship that sailed up the Hudson?—E. G.

A. The "Half Moon" lies in New York Harbor and sails up the Hudson once each year.

Q. Where is the museum of buttons located?—E. L.

A. You probably refer to the Waldes Museum in Prague, Czecholslovakia, which is devoted to a collection of dress fastening devices. It was founded by a Bohemian button manufacturer.

Q. What is the average shrinkage by evaporation on five gallons of gasoline stored in an underground tank for seven days?—W. R. N.

A. The Bureau of Mines says that the shrinkage from ths cause would be nearly or practically negligible. The shrinkage by contraction due to temperature change, such as cooling during the night, may average about one per cent. On being heated again during the day the shrinkage changes to expansion in about the same percentage.

The tunnel to be built between Liverpool and Birkenhead, England, will accommodate four lines of highway traffic on one deck, and two rows of tracks for street cars on a lower level.

English Alphabet is Old.

Ethelbert, King of Kent ,who became a Christian through the gentle influence of Queen Bertha, was reigning in Britain in 597 when the Anglo-Saxon alphabet was devised from the Roman alphabet. This particular alphabet lasted until 1200, when the Franco-English alphabet took its place and was in use until 1600, when the so-called English alphabet came into existence and lasted materially unchanged until 1787 when further revisions were made. More than 70 per cent of the English language words were of Greco Latin origin.

Raindrops Flat at Ends

Raindrops are not perfectly round. Motion pictures show that, contrary to popular opinion, they are flat at the top and bottom, apparently due to air pressure. The flattening makes each drop comparatively only about half its expected height.

THE MOORE FURNITURE COMPANY

THE DOUBLE HOUSE

By Elizabeth Dejeans

She asked not as one demanding references, but he understood instantly. "I come of New England people. My home was in New York, but for several years I have been traveling. My daughter and I have been here about a month. We are at the Hollywood hotel. I can give you references, bank references and others. My name is—John Dascome."

Karesia noticed the brief pause before he spoke his name and the unwavering way in which he looked at her. Her introduction of herself was tentative: "This is my home, and I am Sonya Karesia --Kaime."

Karesia was very certain that she had never heard his name before, and, evidently, he was as much a stranger to the name, Sonya. She was amused. She rather enjoyed the moment's silence; she let the request come from him:

"May I see the next house?"

"Certainly. I will get the keys."

They were upstairs and she rose and went swiftly—she always moved swiftly when she had an objective—but she noticed the way in which he sprang to his feet and remained standing; manners in perfect keeping with his voice and grooming, she reflected, well pleased.

But when she reached the foot of the stairs she had a disagreeable reminder; she saw a black figure vanishing into a doorway. In her intense interest in John Dascome she had forgotten Mary Bliss; evidently the woman had been haunting the stairway and listening.

Karesia's already warm cheeks flamed. But, as she went up, she lost her anger; if she herself had been in as deadly terror of some man whom Mary Bliss had insisted upon interviewing, most likely she also would have crept to the stairway to listen. She saw that Mary Bliss had not closed her door, that she was rovering on the threshold, abjectly fearful.

"It is not the man you described at all, Mary," she said quickly. "It's a family wanting to rent the next house."

"Don't go over there with him—alone!

"You poor thing! I know a good man when I see him."

Long afterward, measured by crowded events, Karesia remembered her assertion and the woman's tragic answer: "There are no good men."

"I think there are," Karesia said, and turned into her own room. "Poor soul! What a bitter answer!"she thought soberly. She pondered, however, as she went downstairs; she did not need to go with him—better, perhaps, if she did not.

She found Dascome standing where she had left him. If she had known that he had followed her to the foot of the stair and had listened to the two voices above, then, when he had heard her descending, had returned swiftly to his former position, she might not have handed over to him so confidently the keys of her domain.

He took them, but asked, "Won't you—would it be too much trouble for you to come, too?"

"I'd rather you formed an unbiased opinion," she answered lightly. The uplift of the corners of her mouth and the momentary gleam in her wistful eyes were simply Sonya Karesia; unwittingly, they had worked mischief—for herself—many and many a time. In moments of self-analysis, she hand granted it, but, just now, she was interested, not in herself, but in him; consequently, the mischief-working smile.

Dascome smiled in return. "But wouldn't I become mixed as to electric switches and cupboards?"

To refuse appeared to her silly. Besides, she wanted to go; she liked his presence. Mary Bliss' bitter answer—"There are no good men"—rankled in her. Sometimes, in quick annoyance, she herself had said the same thing. But this man's quiet impersonal manner drew her like a magnet. She had already owned to herself that, in her very considerable experience with men, no man had ever given her so instantaneously a feeling of liking and trust, of confidence and security.

"That's true," she agreed. "I had better go with you."

XI

Dascome followed Karesia Kaime out into the moonlight. It turned her hair a dense black and the floating gold of her sleeves into silver. Except for a stray gleam or two, her flashing Russian headdress was obliterated. He watched her intently while she unlocked the outer door to the unfurnished side of the house.

"You see, it is quite a separate house," she remarked, as she turned on the lights.

Surreptitiously, Dascome looked at her more than he did at the brightly lighted rooms; these unshaded lights revealed details, the bronze tints in her coloring, the luminous clearness of a very perfect skin, red flecks in her changeable eyes, and the sureness of her movements. There was fire beneath her languor; a warm rich voice with occasionally a lilt in it—and a savage note, if aroused. She was still "La belle, Karesia."

His comments on her house were appreciative. He liked the arrangement of the rooms. "A restful view of the hills, too," he said.

"Yes—isn't it!" Her pride and pleasure in her house was childlike in its sincerity.

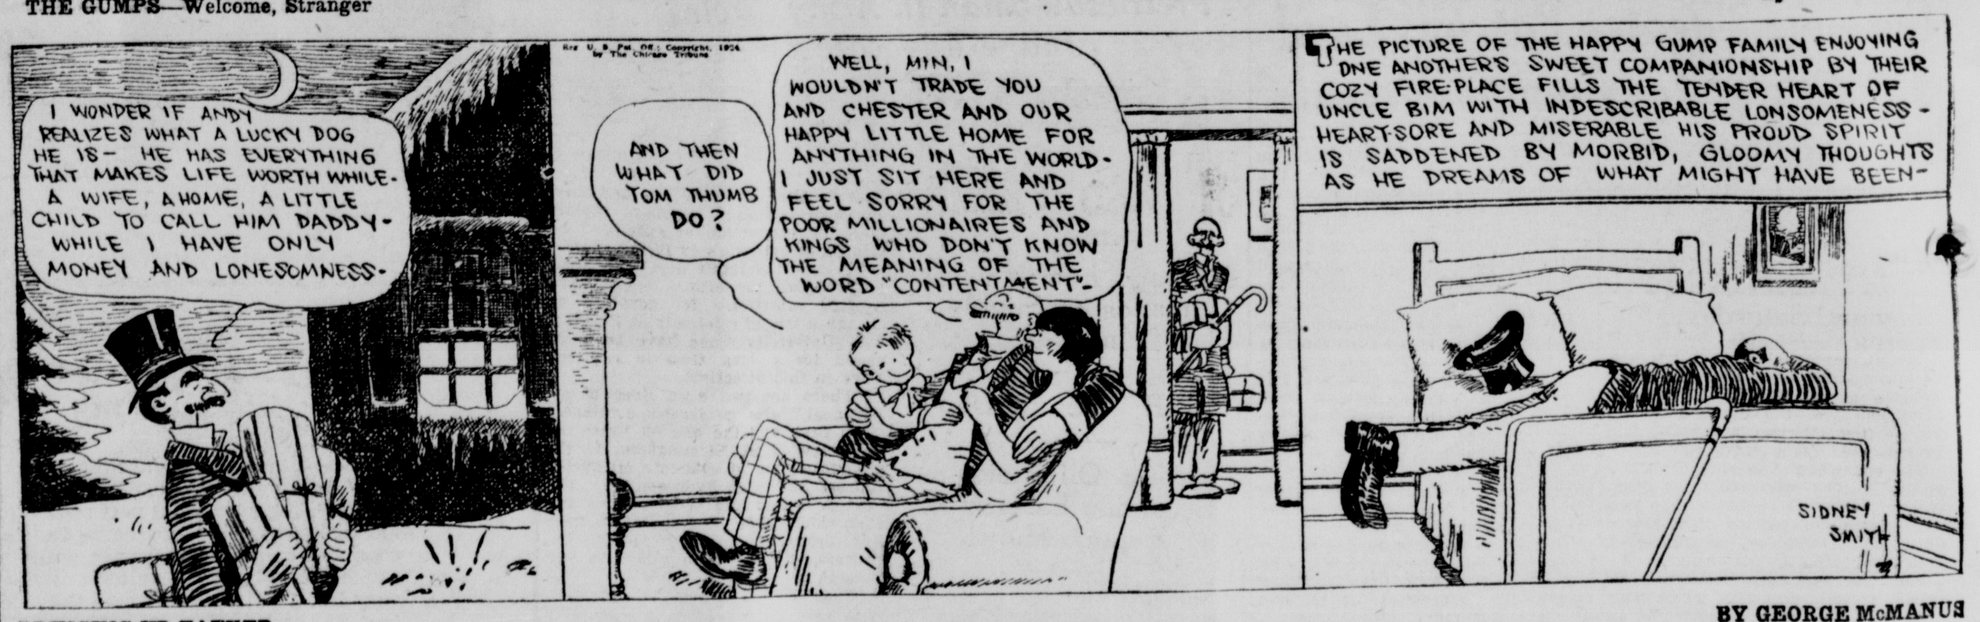

He was utterly impersonal, no questions; he preceded her upstairs and he followed her down, scrupulously polite, detached. Karesia noted it with deep satisfaction. "There is this large closet under the stairs, too, a convenience, though, both houses have separate storerooms in the basement," Karesia told him. "I have had the walls between the two houses deadened; they are just as private and unconnected, really, as if they stood in different lots. It is not one of those houses in which you can hear your neighbor think."

She opened the door into the closet under the stairs and Dascome stepped in. Then it was something in his attitude, a fixedness, that made her wonder. Then she realized, and she, who rarely blushed, felt a smothering wave of heat; she had forgotten to close the concealed opening into her side of the house; when first startled by the sound of knocking, she had gone into the hall to listen and had left the cabinet swung back; he was looking into her hall and up her stairway. . . . And she had just declared that the two houses were quite separate.

THE DOUBLE HOUSE

By Elizabeth Dejeans

She asked not as one demanding references, but he understood instantly. "I come of New England people. My home was in New York, but for several years I have been traveling. My daughter and I have been here about a month. We are at the Hollywood hotel. I can give you references, bank references and others. My name is—John Dascome."

Karesia noticed the brief pause before he spoke his name and the unwavering way in which he looked at her. Her introduction of herself was tentative: "This is my home, and I am Sonya Karesia —Kaime."

Karesia was very certain that she had never heard his name before, and, evidently, he was as much a stranger to the name, Sonya. She was amused. She rather enjoyed the moment's silence; she let the request come from him:

"May I see the next house?"

"Certainly. I will get the keys."

They were upstairs and she rose and went swiftly—she always moved swiftly when she had an objective—but she noticed the way in which he sprang to his feet and remained standing; manners in perfect keeping with his voice and grooming, she reflected, well pleased.

But when she reached the foot of the stairs she had a disagreeable reminder; she saw a black figure vanishing into a doorway. In her intense interest in John Dascome she had forgotten Mary Bliss; evidently the woman had been haunting the stairway and listening.

Karesia's already warm cheeks flamed. But, as she went up, she lost her anger; if she herself had been in as deadly terror of some man whom Mary Bliss had insisted upon interviewing, most likely she also would have crept to the stairway to listen. She saw that Mary Bliss had not closed her door, that she was rovering on the threshold, abjectly fearful.

"It is not the man you described at all, Mary," she said quickly. "It's a family wanting to rent the next house."

"Don't go over there with him—alone!

"You poor thing! I know a good man when I see him."

Long afterward, measured by crowded events, Karesia remembered her assertion and the woman's tragic answer: "There are no good men."

"I think there are," Karesia said, and turned into her own room. "Poor soul! What a bitter answer!"she thought soberly. She pondered, however, as she went downstairs; she did not need to go with him—better, perhaps, if she did not.

She found Dascome standing where she had left him. If she had known that he had followed her to the foot of the stair and had listened to the two voices above, then, when he had heard her descending, had returned swiftly to his former position, she might not have handed over to him so confidently the keys of her domain.

He took them, but asked, "Won't you—would it be too much trouble for you to come, too?"

"I'd rather you formied an unbiased opinion," she answered lightly. The uplift of the corners of her mouth and the momentary gleam in her wistful eyes were simply Sonya Karesia; unwittingly, they had worked mischief—for herself—many and many a time. In moments of self-analysis, she hand granted it, but, just now, she was interested, not in herself, but in him; consequently, the mischief-working smile.

Dascome smiled in return. "But wouldn't I become mixed as to electric switches and cupboards?"

To refuse appeared to her silly. Besides, she wanted to go; she liked his presence. Mary Bliss' bitter answer—"There are no good men"—rankled in her. Sometimes, in quick annoyance, she herself had said the same thing. But this man's quiet impersonal manner drew her like a magnet. She had already owned to herself that, in her very considerable experience with men, no man had ever given her so instantaneously a feeling of liking and trust, of confidence and security.

"That's true," she agreed. "I had better go with you."

XI

Dascome followed Karesia Kaime out into the moonlight. It turned her hair a dense black and the floating gold of her sleeves into silver. Except for a stray gleam or two, her flashing Russian headdress was obliterated. He watched her intently while she unlocked the outer door to the unfurnished side of the house.

"You see, it is quite a separate house," she remarked, as she turned on the lights.

Surreptitiously, Dascome looked at her more than he did at the brightly lighted rooms; these unshaded lights revealed details, the bronze tints in her coloring, the luminous clearness of a very perfect skin, red flecks in her changeable eyes, and the sureness of her movements. There was fire beneath her languor; a warm rich voice with occasionally a lilt in it—and a savage note, if aroused. She was still "La belle, Karesia."

His comments on her house were appreciative. He liked the arrangement of the rooms. "A restful view of the hills, too," he said.

"Yes—isn't it!" Her pride and pleasure in her house was childlike in its sincerity.

He was utterly impersonal, no questions; he preceded her upstairs and he followed her down, scrupulously polite, detached. Karesia noted it with deep satisfaction. "There is this large closet under the stairs, too, a convenience, though, both houses have separate storerooms in the basement," Karesia told him. "I have had the walls between the two houses deadened; they are just as private and unconnected, really, as if they stood in different lots. It is not one of those houses in which you can hear your neighbor think."

She opened the door into the closet under the stairs and Dascome stepped in. Then it was something in his attitude, a fixedness, that made her wonder. Then she realized, and she, who rarely blushed, felt a smothering wave of heat; she had forgotten to close the concealed opening into her side of the house; when first startled by the sound of knocking, she had gone into the hall to listen and had left the cabinet swung back; he was looking into her hall and up her stairway. . . . And she had just declared that the two houses were quite separate.

Old residents who are physically unable to attend the picture otherwise will be called for and driven to the show in Lincoln automobiles furnished through the courtesy of the Liverpool Motor company.

Call for your free ticket if you are a resident of East Liverpool and are 65 years old or over.

Man's Long Instep Bone Primitive.

Man only of the larger primates has retained the long primitive instep bone in spite of his large body development. As the bulk of the body developed science might suppose that the instep would shorten. This human development is accounted unusual in view of the development of apes and similar bipeds, but is partially explained in that man used his heel and foot as he now does, even before his body began to assume large proportions, and this indicates that ordinary humans were short of stature but accustomed to erect posture.

During drouths in Greece children are sent in processions to all wells and springs, under the leadership of a girl adorned with flowers, who sings at each halting place.

"SUB" IS SOUGHT

Existing Oil Fields are Becoming Exhausted, Reports Show.

LONDON, Nov.—The opinion that there will be a gasoline famine five years from now is expressed by Professor W. F. Burstall, Dean of the Faculty of Science at Birmingham University.

Only the discovery in the near future of a cheap, effective substitute can save the automobile and aviation industries from a fuel famine, which will put a complete check upon building throughout the world, Professor Burstall avers.

"Existing oil fields are becoming exhausted, and although new wells are being drilled here and there, they only put a little farther off the day when the world will be faced with a famine. The production of automobiles in the United States and elsewhere is increased far more rapidly than the production of gasoline," he said, in an interview in Birmingham.

Professor Burstall does not hopefully regard the efforts being made to find substitutes for gasoline, although a trio of scientists at Birmingham University alone have been engaged for a long time in research work in this direction.

"There are two main lines of experiment," the professor continued. "The first, and the one on which we are engaged at Birmingham, is the transformation of coal into oil by the process known os hydrognation. The coal is heated and broken down and form thick crude oil, from which finer and lighter oils are extracted. The process, however, is only partially successful.

"This is very expensive and, even if it were not expensive, we are faced with the eventual exhaustion of our coal supplies, which, it is commonly agreed, will occur in about 200 years at the preesnt rate of consumption.

"The second line of experiment is the production of alcohol from vegetable matter by process of fermentation. This is being particularly explored in Australia, South Africa, India and the East generally. In India leaves of many kinds are being subjected to fermentation and thus made to produce alcohol. Australia, in particular, is paying unremitting attention to this, due to the complete absence of oil in the country.

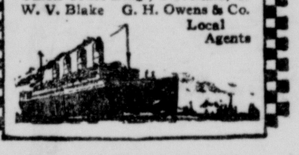

"Here, again, cost is against the use of alcohol, for it costs twice as much to produce as gasoline. A much more serious objection to alsohol, however, is that, to make it commercially successful as a fuel, it would have to produced from vegetable matter containing a high proportion of starch, and cellulose—in other words, that vegetable matter which is needed for human food. There is not an adequate supply of this over and above that needed for human consumption."

There remains the oil-bearing shale, large deposits of which appear in many countries, but Professor Burstall says that it would be only a minute contribution to the needs of the world, and he cannot see any immediate solution of the problem.

Teacher's Head on Silver Dollar

The profile on the American silver dollar is that of Miss Anna W. Williams who for 40 years was a teacher in the public schools of Philadelphia. Geo. Morgan, the designer of the dollar, announced Miss William's head the most perfect he had ever seen and he was quick to choose her from thousands of applicants who presented themselves 46 years ago. Miss Williams, prior to retiring recently, was nationally known for her kindergarten work.

The production of automobiles in the United States and elsewhere is increased far more rapidly than the production of gasoline," he said, in an interview in Birmingham.

Professor Burstall does not hopefully regard the efforts being made to find substitutes for gasoline, although a trio of scientists at Birmingham University alone have been engaged for a long time in research work in this direction.

"There are two main lines of experiment," the professor continued. "The first, and the one on which we are engaged at Birmingham, is the transformation of coal into oil by the process known os hydrognation. The coal is heated and broken down and form thick crude oil, from which finer and lighter oils are extracted. The process, however, is only partially successful.

"This is very expensive and, even if it were not expensive, we are faced with the eventual exhaustion of our coal supplies, which, it is commonly agreed, will occur in about 200 years at the preesnt rate of consumption.

"The second line of experiment is the production of alcohol from vegetable matter by process of fermentation. This is being particularly explored in Australia, South Africa, India and the East generally. In India leaves of many kinds are being subjected to fermentation and thus made to produce alcohol. Australia, in particular, is paying unremitting attention to this, due to the complete absence of oil in the country.

"Here, again, cost is against the use of alcohol, for it costs twice as much to produce as gasoline. A much more serious objection to alsohol, however, is that, to make it commercially successful as a fuel, it would have to produced from vegetable matter containing a high proportion of starch, and cellulose—in other words, that vegetable matter which is needed for human food. There is not an adequate supply of this over and above that needed for human consumption."

There remains the oil-bearing shale, large deposits of which appear in many countries, but Professor Burstall says that it would be only a minute contribution to the needs of the world, and he cannot see any immediate solution of the problem.

Teacher's Head on Silver Dollar

The profile on the American silver dollar is that of Miss Anna W. Williams who for 40 years was a teacher in the public schools of Philadelphia. Geo. Morgan, the designer of the dollar, announced Miss William's head the most perfect he had ever seen and he was quick to choose her from thousands of applicants who presented themselves 46 years ago. Miss Williams, prior to retiring recently, was nationally known for her kindergarten work.

Bout Between Gibbons and Wills Demanded By Ring Critics

Would Pave Way to Scrap With Champ; Firpo Challenges

Conqueror of Kid Norfolk Willing to Take on Harry as Preliminary to Another Shot at Dempsey's Crown.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Dec. 13—A possible bout between Tom Gibbons and Harry Wills as a prelude to a shot at Dempsey's new profile, began cooking over a slow fire. Several critics publicly "demanded" that Wills be granted the recognition his record merits. They expressed the hope that Gibbons was not merely talking to hear his teeth rattle, when he stated, upon his departure for the west several days ago, that he was willing to frolic with Wills, among others, and intimated that such a bout would clear the way to Dempsey like a tank tractor.

That Gibbon's six round knockout of Kid Norfolk had prompted a revival in dropping Cauliflower was also indicated by the fact that Luis Firpo, the well known human being, also stepped out with a challenge to Gibbons today. The senor infers that Thomas would be his for the asking. One thing the writer wishes to make clear: Of all the leading heavyweights, Gibbons is the most sincere, he said that he was ready to meet Wills. I will admit that he hasn't suffered a rush of promoters to the head, in consequence, but the fact remains that if Gibbons says he will fight Wills they are as good as in the ring, provided the dark one is acquiescent.

Our Mr. Rickard has been strangely silent on the question, however. there is a persistent idea along Broadway that Wills is to be kept out of the big shots as much as possible, and certainly, if Gibbons goes on to another match with Dempsey without first climbing over Wills, this belief will be tinged with a faint suggestion of fact. A Gibbons-Wills bout would pile the customers in neat, compact stacks.

Further, it would provide the so-called logical contender for the championship and permit the promoter to make a single dollar grow twice in the same place, a highly desirable situation. Yet the silence remains profound.

However, today's "demands" may mean the preface for big business ahead. The bout needs little smoke-up because Wills, regardless of indifferent performances last year, remains the most dangerous challenger and Gibbons is a gent who may make a sap out of any man at any time.

How he would fare with Wills is a moot question. He would have to give away 35 pounds in weight and much in strength, which counts plenty in the wrestling that must come in a bout of 15 rounds. Yet, in several ways, Wills would be an ideal target for such as Gibbons.

The writer saw him tie up Dempsey for 15 rounds of catch-as-catch-can at Shelby. Wills is an infighter, first and last, and not as clever at it as Dempsey at that. His right to the body is his best punch and Gibbons is seldom hit solidly with that hand. At long range, Thomas would be playing on his own home grounds.

All in all, it is quite an interesting equation. In fact far too interesting to be settled out of the ring.

KAPLAN K. O'S. JOSE LOMBARDO

Will Battle Danny Kramer for Featherweight Title.

The fight was the semi-final in a tournament to decide the king of all featherweights, outstanding pretender to the throne vacated by Johnny Dundee. Kaplan will clash with Danny Kramer, Philadelphia southpaw slugger, in the final round on January 2.

Lombardo was no match for the rugged Connecticut boy. He was battered freely by two left hooks and a right uppercut sent him to the mat in the fourth round, for the first knockout.

DENISON OPENS WITH ASHLAND

GRANVILLE, Dec. 13. — The basketball season at Denison will open this Saturday night, when the Ashland team comes to Granville. There will be no more games until after the Christmas recess, which begins Dec. 19 and ends Jan. 5. On January 10 Denison will play Antioch here.

The hardest games of the season's schedule will probably be that with Ohio-Wesleyan of Jan. 14 and that with Wittenburg on Jan. 27, both at Granville. All home games will be played in the new basketball gymnasium.

Scientist Cites Greatest Needs of The World Today

LONDON — Under the heading of "What the World Wants," Sir Robert Hadfield, famous English scientist, enumerates the four following things as those most needed by the world:

An alloy, ferrous or non-ferrous, possessing 5 per cent to 100 per cent higher tenacity than any known combination, while at the same time not being brittle.

BY NORMAN E. BROWN

That age is beginning to tell on the gray-haired leader of the Cleveland Indians, Tris Speaker, is indicated by the 1924 American league batting averages recently issued. Speaker was not the champion batter in of runs in 1924 that he was in 1923, when he tied with Babe Ruth for the league leadership in this respect. In 1923 Speaker played 150 games and knocked in 130 runs. In fifteen less games last season he knocked in just exactly half as many tallies.

Joe Sewell, the demon walloper from Titus, Ala., was the one Indian to retain his batting punch. Joe led the Indians this year with 104 runs resulting from his efforts at the plate.

While this mark is five runs short of his 1923 record, which placed him forth in the standing of timely swatters, it is so close to his average of 1923 that it proves his consistency.

Sewell didn't get as many free trips to first base this year as he did in 1923, when he walked ninety-two times and was hit seven times. In 1924 he drew only sixty-seven bases on balls and was smacked only twice.

A new timely hitter champion was produced this year in Leon Goslin, whose record of 129 runs batted in is only one run below the leading mark of 1923.

As Goslin's great work with the stick helps to explain why Washington won the American league championship, the hitting marks of the Indians serve to explain in a measure why the Indians finished in sixth place.

The New York state boxing commission has pulled many boners in its career. It has been panned unmercifully for alleged "raw" dealings handed out-of-town boxers and the energetic methods it has used in its apparent efforts to make local men champions of some kind or other. But give the devil his due. The commission is enforcing one rule which should be adopted generally by local and state boxing bodies. That is the one which prohibits fighters under 21 entering bouts of more than six rounds duration.

The general run of boxers break into the fight game when they are about 15 to 16 years old and still growing. They start in the fly, bantam or feather classes and in many cases continue to develop until they are middle or heavyweights.

Thees lads need to store up energy while they are growing. It is easy for them to burn themselves out during this period. They are ambitious. Success lures them on. They become popular. Offers of bouts become numerous. They find themselves in demand and the temptation to accept the opportunities while they are available can't be resisted.

As a result they fight often. They go at high speed for 10, 12 or 15 rounds at frequent intervals. Each one of these fights saps teh reserve strength they have built up. Follows quickly another intensive training period to reach the pink again for another such battle. Another hard fight leaves them burnt out again. So it goes on.

Four and six round bouts, on the other hand, gave these lads just as much chance to show their wares and does not drain their strength and vitality. They are able to build up while climbing the fistic ladder.

W. V. U. WILL NOT HAVE BIG SQUAD

One-year Rule Reduces Quantity, Though Quality Still is High.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Dec. 13.—Athletic department officials at West Virginia University do not look for a large varsity basketball squad this winter and are making arrangements to equip only 30 men. Since the inauguration of the one-year residence rule Mountaineer varsity teams have been lacking in numbers but not in quality. All things considered the number of men at work under floor coaches this year will establish a new university record but as most of the material is freshman Coach Francis H. Stadsvold will have more time than usual to devote to first string timber.

Lettermen expected to report to Coach Stadsvold next week are Captain Roy Hawley, center; Natus Rohrbaugh, guard; Fred Funk, forward, and Aaron Oliker, forward and guard. Other holdovers from the championship team of las tyear are Fred Graham, football captain, center; Clarence Murrin, forward; Bob Bradford and Lou Titley, guards. Veterans lost are Pierre Hill, forward, and Doug Bowers, guard—two former captains—and Joe Bartell, forward.

From last year's freshman quint Coach Stads vold will get Julian Murrin, forward; Ed Morrison, center; "Whitey" Kerr, guard; and Ed Patrick, center and forward. Shortly after the 1924 season opened Mike Hardy got into scholastic difficulties and had to leave the squad, but is up in his work now and may be of some value to Stadsvold. Lorentz is another freshman who showed promise and who is expected to report next week.

"Deggie" Simmons, captain and forward of the 1924 yearlings; Haines, a hard-working guard, and Goodman, center, are not in school at this time and Gene Hammond, clever guard from Erie, Pa., entered Grove City college instead of coming back to the university. Simmons, however, may enroll at the start of the second semester and if he does will be available for more than half of the games on the 1925 program. Simmons and Julian Murrin led the freshman team in scoring last winter with 117 points each.

High Cagers Open Season Here Tonight

East Liverpool high school cagers will go into action tonight on the high school gymnasium, in their first game of the season, against Sewickley, Pa.

Coach O. V. Boone's squad has been working regularly each afternoon of the present week, and tonight's engagement is expected to show, to some extent, the results of the week's practices.

It will also serve to give the squad a taste of actual combat before the team goes to New Castle next week and will enable Coach Boone to survey his forward prospects.

Guard and center positions will be taken care of in a capable manner by McConville, Captain Liebschner and Paul English, a trio of football stars of the recent season and, consequently, in first class condition for a strenuous cage campaign.

As Boone has pointed out previously, lack of "beef" which characterizes the numerous forward prospects makes it difficult for him to make selections at this stage. While several of the lads are good shots, they are small and light. It is quite possible that Boone may shift Captain Liebschner onto a forward job. This would give the team a veteran player at each end of the floor and an experienced pivot man.

Boone probably will have a squad larger than usual on the floor tonight. Probably 10 men will make the trip to New Castle next week. Not until after the holidays will the squad be pared, according to present plans.

Tonight's engagement is scheduled to start at 8 o'clock. The advance seat sale, including season ticket reservations, indicates a full house.

Laughlin Downs Trotters; Halls Easy For Potters

"Y" Industrial Floor League Contests Furnish Plenty of Action; Wain Scoring Star With Nine Two-pointers.

Laughlin No. 6 showed the Trotters the way to defeat by the score of 28 to 21, while the Potters more than doubled the score on Hall China, winning by the count of 42 to 20, in "Y" Industrial basketball league contests last night.

The contest between Laughlin No. 6 and Trotters was close, neither team at any time having a big lead. Laughlin No. 6 was ahead 16 to 11, when the first half was called.

In the second half Laughlin kept the margin that it gained in the first half and when the timer's whistle ended the contest, the score book gave Laughlin seven points to the good.

Beeler, McVey and Watson were the star performers for Trotters.

There was not much to the Potters-Hall China game, the Potters-making a runaway of it. They sewed up the game in the first half when they scored 18 points to their opponent's five.

The Potters increased their lead in the second half and were 22 points in front when the game ended.

Wain for the Potters, lead in point-making, scoring 19. Vorndran, accounted for six two-pointers for the Potters while Guyton, Johnson and Zuck made the rest of the points. Mackey, Dyer and Martin played their positions best for Hall China.

Lineup and summaries:

Laughlin 6		Trotters
Webb	F	McVey
Duffy	F	Beeler
Jester	C	Kerr
McGuiness	G	Brooks
Saulsberry	G	Watson

Field goals—Webb 5, Duffy 4, Jester 2, McGuiness, McVey 3, Beeler 5, Watson 2, Kerr.

World's Greatest Racing Car Builder Has High Praise For The Chrysler Six

Pronounced as though spelled, Crysler

Harry A. Miller, unsurpassed authority on motor cars, is profoundly impressed with the Chrysler Six and the way it is manufactured.

For years "Miller Specials"—built in the wonderfully equipped Miller Shops at Los Angeles—have won almost every automobile race of note—many times in "one, two, three" order.

Recently he visited the Chrysler Six plant in Detroit, and tells in the letter below how he marveled at its completeness, its modern equipment, and the care and precision employed in manufacture:—

MILLER ENGINE WORKS
HARRY A. MILLER
6662 LONG BEACH AVENUE
LOS ANGELES

Greer-Robbins Company,
1144 South Flower Street,
Los Angeles, California.

Gentlemen:

The Chrysler factory is the most modern manufacturing establishment I have ever visited. Everything is done with the very latest type of machinery. Practically everything that goes into the Chrysler car is made in the Chrysler factory. While castings are made outside the plant, all the machining is done in the Chrysler plant with a degree of care and accuracy that was truly amazing to me.

The hollow 7-bearing crankshaft of the Chrysler car is balanced under every known test before it is placed in the motor. The same procedure is followed in balancing other reciprocating parts.

The significance of this vitally important balancing is in its elimination of friction and vibration. This was brought home to me most forcefully when I took hold of the flywheel of a motor just being built and spun it easily with one finger. The pistons and connecting rods were attached to the shaft and everything but the tappets were in place. This is the only stock motor that I ever was able to turn over with such an extremely light effort.

Quick acceleration, volume of power and fuel economy attain remarkable heighths in the Chrysler car, resultant of its type of motor that incorporated light reciprocating parts, small bore and stroke, all of which have their origin in lessons learned in building and racing cars on the speedways. The Chrysler motor has a piston displacement of only 201.46 cubic inches, yet it develops 70 horsepower.

Very sincerely yours,

Harry A Miller

Bout Between Gibbons and Wills Demanded By Ring Critics

Would Pave Way to Scrap With Champ; Firpo Challenges

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Dec. 13—A possible bout between Tom Gibbons and Harry Wills as a prelude to a shot at Dempsey's new profile, began cooking over a slow fire. Several critics publicly "demanded" that Wills be granted the recognition his record merits. They expressed the hope that Gibbons was not merely talking to hear his teeth rattle, when he stated, upon his departure for the west several days ago, that he was willing to frolic with Wills, among others, and intimated that such a bout would clear the way to Dempsey like a tank tractor.

That Gibbon's six round knockout of Kid Norfolk had prompted a revival in dropping Cauliflower was also indicated by the fact that Luis Firpo, the well known human being, also stepped out with a challenge to Gibbons today. The senor infers that Thomas would be his for the asking. One thing the writer wishes to make clear: Of all the leading heavyweights, Gibbons is the most sincere, he said that he was ready to meet Wills. I will admit that he hasn't suffered a rush of promoters to the head, in consequence, but the fact remains that if Gibbons says he will fight Wills they are as good as in the ring, provided the dark one is acquiescent.

Our Mr. Rickard has been strangely silent on the question, however. there is a persistent idea along Broadway that Wills is to be kept out of the big shots as much as possible, and certainly, if Gibbons goes on to another match with Dempsey without first climbing over Wills, this belief will be tinged with a faint suggestion of fact. A Gibbons-Wills bout would pile the customers in neat, compact stacks.

Further, it would provide the so-called logical contender for the championship and permit the promoter to make a single dollar grow twice in the same place, a highly desirable situation. Yet the silence remains profound.

However, today's "demands" may mean the preface for big business ahead. The bout needs little smoke-up because Wills, regardless of indifferent performances last year, remains the most dangerous challenger and Gibbons is a gent who may make a sap out of any man at any time.

How he would fare with Wills is a moot question. He would have to give away 35 pounds in weight and much in strength, which counts plenty in the wrestling that must come in a bout of 15 rounds. Yet, in several ways, Wills would be an ideal target for such as Gibbons.

The writer saw him tie up Dempsey for 15 rounds of catch-as-catch-can at Shelby. Wills is an infighter, first and last, and not as clever at it as Dempsey at that. His right to the body is his best punch and Gibbons is seldom hit solidly with that hand. At long range, Thomas would be playing on his own home grounds.

All in all, it is quite an interesting equation. In fact far too interesting to be settled out of the ring.

While this mark is five runs short of his 1923 record, which placed him forth in the standing of timely swatters, it is so close to his average of 1923 that it proves his consistency.

Sewell didn't get as many free trips to first base this year as he did in 1923, when he walked ninety-two times and was hit seven times. In 1924 he drew only sixty-seven bases on balls and was smacked only twice.

A new timely hitter champion was produced this year in Leon Goslin, whose record of 129 runs batted in is only one run below the leading mark of 1923.

As Goslin's great work with the stick helps to explain why Washington won the American league championship, the hitting marks of the Indians serve to explain in a measure why the Indians finished in sixth place.

Babe Ruth received the record number of bases on balls, 142, and fanned the most times, eighty-one.

The New York state boxing commission has pulled many boners in its career. It has been panned unmercifully for alleged "raw" dealings handed out-of-town boxers and the energetic methods it has used in its apparent efforts to make local men champions of some kind or other. But give the devil his due. The commission is enforcing one rule which should be adopted generally by local and state boxing bodies. That is the one which prohibits fighters under 21 entering bouts of more than six rounds duration.

The general run of boxers break into the fight game when they are about 15 to 16 years old and still growing. They start in the fly, bantam or feather classes and in many cases continue to develop until they are middle or heavyweights.

Thees lads need to store up energy while they are growing. It is easy for them to burn themselves out during this period. They are ambitious. Success lures them on. They become popular. Offers of bouts become numerous. They find themselves in demand and the temptation to accept the opportunities while they are available can't be resisted.

As a result they fight often. They go at high speed for 10, 12 or 15 rounds at frequent intervals. Each one of these fights saps teh reserve strength they have built up. Follows quickly another intensive training period to reach the pink again for another such battle. Another hard fight leaves them burnt out again. So it goes on.

Four and six round bouts, on the other hand, gave these lads just as much chance to show their wares and does not drain their strength and vitality. They are able to build up while climbing the fistic ladder.

W. V. U. WILL NOT HAVE BIG SQUAD

One-year Rule Reduces Quantity, Though Quality Still is High.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Dec. 13.—Athletic department officials at West Virginia University do not look for a large varsity basketball squad this winter and are making arrangements to equip only 30 men. Since the inauguration of the one-year residence rule Mountaineer varsity teams have been lacking in numbers but not in quality. All things considered the number of men at work under floor coaches this year will establish a new university record but as most of the material is freshman Coach Francis H. Stadsvold will have more time than usual to devote to first string timber.

Lettermen expected to report to Coach Stadsvold next week are Captain Roy Hawley, center; Natus Rohrbaugh, guard; Fred Funk, forward, and Aaron Oliker, forward and guard. Other holdovers from the championship team of las tyear are Fred Graham, football captain, center; Clarence Murrin, forward; Bob Bradford and Lou Titley, guards. Veterans lost are Pierre Hill, forward, and Doug Bowers, guard—two former captains—and Joe Bartell, forward.

From last year's freshman quint Coach Stads vold will get Julian Murrin, forward; Ed Morrison, center; "Whitey" Kerr, guard; and Ed Patrick, center and forward. Shortly after the 1924 season opened Mike Hardy got into scholastic difficulties and had to leave the squad, but is up in his work now and may be of some value to Stadsvold. Lorentz is another freshman who showed promise and who is expected to report next week.

"Deggie" Simmons, captain and forward of the 1924 yearlings; Haines, a hard-working guard, and Goodman, center, are not in school at this time and Gene Hammond, clever guard from Erie, Pa., entered Grove City college instead of coming back to the university. Simmons, however, may enroll at the start of the second semester and if he does will be available for more than half of the games on the 1925 program. Simmons and Julian Murrin led the freshman team in scoring last winter with 117 points each.

High Cagers Open Season Here Tonight

East Liverpool high school cagers will go into action tonight on the high school gymnasium, in their first game of the season, against Sewickley, Pa.

Coach O. V. Boone's squad has been working regularly each afternoon of the present week, and tonight's engagement is expected to show, to some extent, the results of the week's practices.

It will also serve to give the squad a taste of actual combat before the team goes to New Castle next week and will enable Coach Boone to survey his forward prospects.

Guard and center positions will be taken care of in a capable manner by McConville, Captain Liebschner and Paul English, a trio of football stars of the recent season and, consequently, in first class condition for a strenuous cage campaign.

As Boone has pointed out previously, lack of "beef" which characterizes the numerous forward prospects makes it difficult for him to make selections at this stage. While several of the lads are good shots, they are small and light. It is quite possible that Boone may shift Captain Liebschner onto a forward job. This would give the team a veteran player at each end of the floor and an experienced pivot man.

Boone probably will have a squad larger than usual on the floor tonight. Probably 10 men will make the trip to New Castle next week. Not until after the holidays will the squad be pared, according to present plans.

Tonight's engagement is scheduled to start at 8 o'clock. The advance seat sale, including season ticket reservations, indicates a full house.

Laughlin Downs Trotters; Halls Easy For Potters

"Y" Industrial Floor League Contests Furnish Plenty of Action; Wain Scoring Star With Nine Two-pointers.

Laughlin No. 6 showed the Trotters the way to defeat by the score of 28 to 21, while the Potters more than doubled the score on Hall China, winning by the count of 42 to 20, in "Y" Industrial basketball league contests last night.

The contest between Laughlin No. 6 and Trotters was close, neither team at any time having a big lead. Laughlin No. 6 was ahead 16 to 11, when the first half was called.

In the second half Laughlin kept the margin that it gained in the first half and when the timer's whistle ended the contest, the score book gave Laughlin seven points to the good.

Webb, Duffy and Jester were the leaders in the scoring line for Laughlin No. 6, while McGuiness and Saulsberry gave a good account of themselves at the guards.

Beeler, McVey and Watson were the star performers for Trotters.

There was not much to the Potters-Hall China game, the Potters making a runaway of it. They sewed up the game in the first half when they scored 18 points to their opponent's five.

The Potters increased their lead in the second half and were 22 points in front when the game ended.

Wain for the Potters, lead in point-making, scoring 19. Vorndran, accounted for six two-pointers for the Potters while Guyton, Johnson and Zuck made the rest of the points. Mackey, Dyer and Martin played their positions best for Hall China.

Lineup and summaries:

Laughlin 6		Trotters
Webb	F	McVey

Harry A. Miller
Builder of the celebrated "Miller Special"

World's Greatest Racing Car Builder Has High Praise For The Chrysler Six

Pronounced as though spelled Crysler

Harry A. Miller, unsurpassed authority on motor cars, is profoundly impressed with the Chrysler Six and the way it is manufactured.

For years "Miller Specials"—built in the wonderfully equipped Miller Shops at Los Angeles—have won almost every automobile race of note—many times in "one, two, three" order.

Therefore, Harry A. Miller is recognized everywhere as the world's greatest designer and builder of racing cars.

Recently he visited the Chrysler Six plant in Detroit, and tells in the letter below how he marveled at its completeness, its modern equipment, and the care and precision employed in manufacture:—

MILLER ENGINE WORKS
HARRY A. MILLER
6062 LONG BEACH AVENUE
LOS ANGELES

Greer-Robbins Company,
1144 South Flower Street,
Los Angeles, California.
Gentlemen:

The Chrysler factory is the most modern manufacturing establishment I have ever visited. Everything is done with the very latest type of machinery. Practically everything that goes into the Chrysler car is made in the Chrysler factory. While castings are made outside the plant, all the machining is done in the Chrysler plant with a degree of care and accuracy that was truly amazing to me.

The hollow 7-bearing crankshaft of the Chrysler car is balanced under every known test before it is placed in the motor. The same procedure is followed in balancing other reciprocating parts.

The significance of this vitally important balancing is in its elimination of friction and vibration. This was brought home to me most forcefully when I took hold of the flywheel of a motor just being built and spun it easily with one finger. The pistons and connecting rods were attached to the shaft and everything but the tappets were in place. This is the only stock motor that I ever was able to turn over with such an extremely light effort.

Quick acceleration, volume of power and fuel economy attain remarkable heighths in the Chrysler car, resultant of its type of motor that incorporated light reciprocating parts, small bore and stroke, all of which have their origin in lessons learned in building and racing cars on the speedways. The Chrysler motor has a piston displacement of only 201.46 cubic inches, yet it develops 70 horsepower.

Very sincerely yours,
Harry A Miller

Bout Between Gibbons and Wills Demanded By Ring Critics

Would Pave Way to Scrap With Champ; Firpo Challenges

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Dec. 13—A possible bout between Tom Gibbons and Harry Wills as a prelude to a shot at Dempsey's new profile, began cooking over a slow fire. Several critics publicly "demanded" that Wills be granted the recognition his record merits. They expressed the hope that Gibbons was not merely talking to hear his teeth rattle, when he stated, upon his departure for the west several days ago, that he was willing to frolic with Wills, among others, and intimated that such a bout would clear the way to Dempsey like a tank tractor.

That Gibbon's six round knockout of Kid Norfolk had prompted a revival in dropping Cauliflower was also indicated by the fact that Luis Firpo, the well known human being, also stepped out with a challenge to Gibbons today. The senor infers that Thomas would be his for the asking. One thing the writer wishes to make clear: Of all the leading heavyweights, Gibbons is the most sincere, he said that he was ready to meet Wills. I will admit that he hasn't suffered a rush of promoters to the head, in consequence, but the fact remains that if Gibbons says he will fight Wills they are as good as in the ring, provided the dark one is acquiescent.

Our Mr. Rickard has been strangely silent on the question, however, there is a persistent idea along Broadway that Wills is to be kept out of the big shots as much as possible, and certainly, if Gibbons goes on to another match with Dempsey without first climbing over Wills, this belief will be tinged with a faint suggestion of fact. A Gibbons-Wills bout would pile the customers in neat, compact stacks.

Further, it would provide the so-called logical contender for the championship and permit the promoter to make a single dollar grow twice in the same place, a highly desirable situation. Yet the silence remains profound.

However, today's "demands" may mean the preface for big business ahead. The bout needs little smoke-up because Wills, regardless of indifferent performances last year, remains the most dangerous challenger and Gibbons is a gent who may make a sap out of any man at any time.

How he would fare with Wills is a moot question. He would have to give away 35 pounds in weight and much in strength, which counts plenty in the wrestling that must come in a bout of 15 rounds. Yet, in several ways, Wills would be an ideal target for such as Gibbons.

The writer saw him tie up Dempsey for 15 rounds of catch-as-catch-can at Shelby. Wills is an infighter, first and last, and not as clever at it as Dempsey at that. His right to the body is his best punch and Gibbons is seldom hit solidly with that hand. At long range, Thomas would be playing on his own home grounds.

All in all, it is quite an interesting equation. In fact far too interesting to be settled out of the ring.

Will Battle Danny Kramer for Featherweight Title.

The fight was the semi-final in a tournament to decide the king of all featherweights, outstanding pretender to the throne vacated by Johnny Dundee. Kaplan will clash with Danny Kramer, Philadelphia southpaw slugger, in the final round on January 2.

Lombardo was no match for the rugged Connecticut boy. He was battered freely by two left hooks and a right uppercut sent him to the mat in the fourth round, for the first knockout.

LONDON — Under the heading of "What the World Wants," Sir Robert Hadfield, famous English scientist, enumerates the four following things as those most needed by the world:

An alloy, ferrous or non-ferrous, possessing 5 per cent to 100 per cent higher tenacity than any known combination, while at the same time not being brittle.

Refractory materials for the lining of steel melting furnaces and ladies that would be absolutely unattacked by erosion or corrosion.

BY NORMAN E. BROWN

That age is beginning to tell on the gray-haired leader of the Cleveland Indians, Tris Speaker, is indicated by the 1924 American league batting averages recently issued. Speaker was not the champion batter in of runs in 1924 that he was in 1923, when he tied with Babe Ruth for the league leadership in this respect. In 1923 Speaker played 150 games and knocked in 130 runs. In fifteen less games last season he knocked in just exactly half as many tallies.

Joe Sewell, the demon walloper from Titus, Ala., was the one Indian to retain his batting punch. Joe led the Indians this year with 104 runs resulting from his efforts at the plate.

While this mark is five runs short of his 1923 record, which placed him forth in the standing of timely swatters, it is so close to his average of 1923 that it proves his consistency.

Sewell didn't get as many free trips to first base this year as he did in 1923, when he walked ninety-two times and was hit seven times. In 1924 he drew only sixty-seven bases on balls and was smacked only twice.

A new timely hitter champion was produced this year in Leon Goslin, whose record of 129 runs batted in is only one run below the leading mark of 1923.

As Goslin's great work with the stick helps to explain why Washington won the American league championship, the hitting marks of the Indians serve to explain in a measure why the Indians finished in sixth place.

Babe Ruth received the record number of bases on balls, 142, and fanned the most times, eighty-one.

WIT AND HUMOR FROM JAPAN

If you wish to learn the highest truth you must begin with the alphabet.

The path of duty lies in what is near at hand; and men seek for it in what is remote.

Pinch yourself and know how others feel.

Though you lock the door ever so securely trouble will find a way in.

The second word makes the fray.

In the house where the samisen is played all day long there will be little rice in the larder.

He who hunts two hares leaves one and loses the other.

He who buys what he needs not, sells what he needs.

The mile is longest to him who is tired.

If every day was a sunny day who would not wish for rain.

It is difficult to be strong and not be rash.

Those who travel on horseback know nothing of the toil of those who travel on foot.

Never trust a woman even if she has borne you seven children.

The acolyte at the gate reads scriptures he has never learned.

The reason why parents love the younger children best is because they have now so little hope that the elder will do well.

Old Register Has Famous Names.

In the attic of an old house there was found recently a register formtearly used at Hotel Monroe, Sweetwater, Tenn., that contained a group of famous names(showing among others who had stopped there: President U. S. Grant, who besides stopping there, had ordered 'I quart and 12 cigers;" John Robinson, former circus "king;" Sitting Bull and Gray Horse, famous Indian Chiefs, and General Tom Thumb, the celebrated dwarf.

Device Saves $60,000,000.

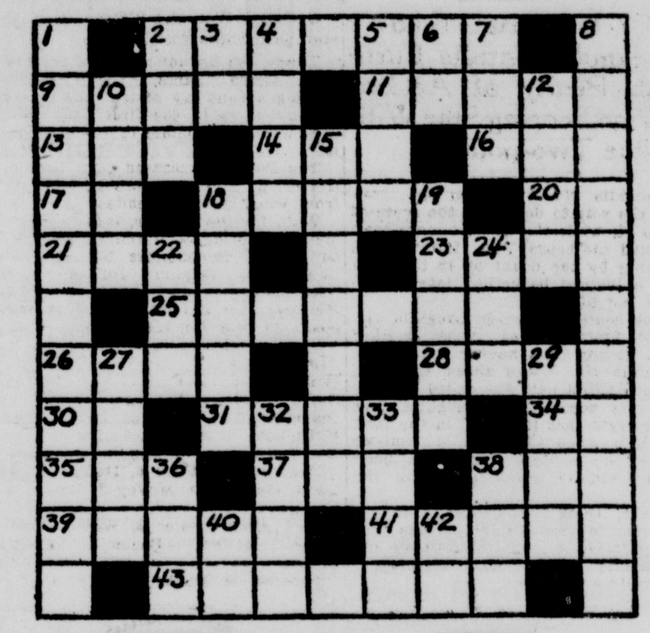

In the last 10 years auto buyers have been saved $60,000,000 by a car-loading device invented by E. S. Evans of Detroit. Mr. Evans was formerly a librarian of Richmond, Va., and his invention saves about $15 per auto in time, labor and lumber originally expended in loading and blocking an auto in a freight car.

CLARK B. FIRESTONE, FORMER LISBON RESIDENT, AUTHOR OF ANOTHER BOOK

"The Coasts of Illusion" by Cincinnati Editorial Writer, is Termed "Classic" by Literary Critics.

Clark B. Firestone, former resident of Lisbon, now an editorial writer for the Cincinnati Times-Star, is author of a new book, "The Coasts of Illusion,' which literary critics have termed a "classic."

The book according to the preface, "gives a view of the earth and its inhabitants as seen through the haze of distance whether of space or time." The writer gives in compact form information that has historical importance as is summarizes the results of numerous adventures, many travels and a myriad of incursions and excursions into places remote from civilized centers.

Firestone was formerly connected with the Firestone Bank at Lisbon, which is now in charge of his brother. He has been engaged in newspaper work for many years, but during the war resided in Lisbon where he took an active part in Liberty loan and other campaigns.

In addition to his editorial work on the Cincinnati Times-Star, Firestone is a dramatic critic. He was on the editorial staff of several New York newspapers before he became affiliated with the Cincinnati paper.

"The Coast of Illusion," one critic says, "is a book of utter fascination that must remain a classic in its own field for many years to come." Phil A. Kinsley, of the Philadelphia record, says the book "attests not only his industry but his great skill as a writer and the volume contributes a great deal to the world's entertainment and knowledge.

Last Day for Free Tickets for Film, "Abraham Lincoln"

Today is the last day East Liverpool residents will be able to obtain a free ticket to the Monday afternoon's showing of the photoplay, "Abraham Lincoln," at The American Theater as guests of the Review Tribune.

The turn-out has been very good in response to The Review-Tribune's invitation to take everyone in East Liverpool who had attained the age of 65 or over free to the first afternoons showing of the entertaining drama builded around the life of the great emancipator.

Remember Lincoln automobiles have been offered through the courtesy of the Liverpool Motor Company, local Lincoln and Ford sales organization, to all aged residents who are physically unable to attend The Review-Tribune party otherwise.

We spend six dollars on fire protection and one dollar for health protection. All of which goes to prove that we place a higher value on our houses than we do on our health.

WIT AND HUMOR FROM JAPAN

If you wish to learn the highest truth you must begin with the alphabet.

The path of duty lies in what is near at hand; and men seek for it in what is remote.

This column (Number three of a series) is devoted today to proverbs from the Japanese.

Pinch yourself and know how others feel.

Though you lock the door ever so securely trouble will find a way in.

The second word makes the fray.

In the house where the samisen is played all day long there will be little rice in the larder.

He who hunts two hares leaves one and loses the other.

He who buys what he needs not, sells what he needs.

The mile is longest to him who is tired.

If every day was a sunny day who would not wish for rain.

It is difficult to be strong and not be rash.

Those who travel on horseback know nothing of the toil of those who travel on foot.

Never trust a woman even if she has borne you seven children.

The acolyte at the gate reads scriptures he has never learned.

Love does not recognize the difference between peasant and mikado.

The reason why parents love the younger children best is because they have now so little hope that the elder will do well.

Going down hill no one is old.

Where profit is, loss is hidden near by.

Old Register Has Famous Names.

In the attic of an old house there was found recently a register formtearly used at Hotel Monroe, Sweetwater, Tenn., that contained a group of famous names(showing among others who had stopped there: President U. S. Grant, who besides stopping there, had ordered 'I quart and 12 cigers;" John Robinson, former circus "king;" Sitting Bull and Gray Horse, famous Indian Chiefs, and General Tom Thumb, the celebrated dwarf.

Device Saves $60,000,000.

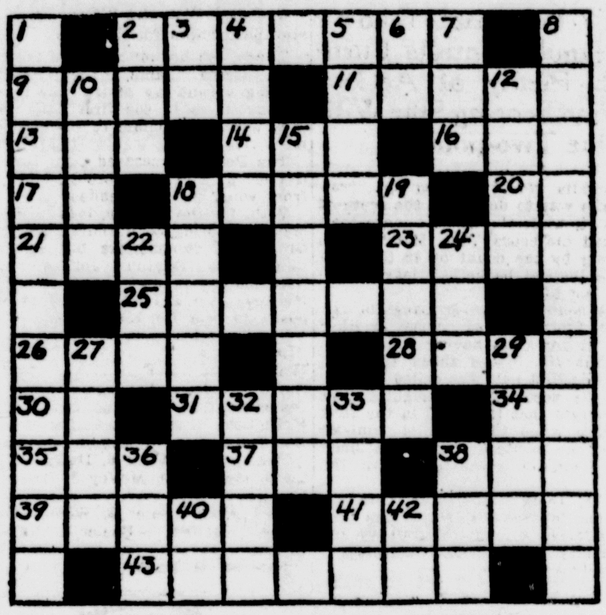

In the last 10 years auto buyers have been saved $60,000,000 by a car-loading device invented by E. S. Evans of Detroit. Mr. Evans was formerly a librarian of Richmond, Va., and his invention saves about $15 per auto in time, labor and lumber originally expended in loading and blocking an auto in a freight car.

CLARK B. FIRESTONE, FORMER LISBON RESIDENT, AUTHOR OF ANOTHER BOOK

"The Coasts of Illusion" by Cincinnati Editorial Writer, is Termed "Classic" by Literary Critics.

Clark B. Firestone, former resident of Lisbon, now an editorial writer for the Cincinnati Times-Star, is author of a new book, "The Coasts of Illusion,' which literary critics have termed a "classic."

The book according to the preface, "gives a view of the earth and its inhabitants as seen through the haze of distance whether of space or time." The writer gives in compact form information that has historical importance as is summarizes the results of numerous adventures, many travels and a myriad of incursions and excursions into places remote from civilized centers.

Firestone was formerly connected with the Firestone Bank at Lisbon, which is now in charge of his brother. He has been engaged in newspaper work for many years, but during the war resided in Lisbon where he took an active part in Liberty loan and other campaigns.

In addition to his editorial work on the Cincinnati Times-Star, Firestone is a dramatic critic. He was on the editorial staff of several New York newspapers before he became affiliated with the Cincinnati paper.

"The Coast of Illusion," one critic says, "is a book of utter fascination that must remain a classic in its own field for many years to come." Phil A. Kinsley, of the Philadelphia record, says the book "attests not only his industry but his great skill as a writer and the volume contributes a great deal to the world's entertainment and knowledge.

Last Day for Free Tickets for Film, "Abraham Lincoln"

Today is the last day East Liverpool residents will be able to obtain a free ticket to the Monday afternoon's showing of the photoplay, "Abraham Lincoln," at The American Theater as guests of the Review Tribune.

The turn-out has been very good in response to The Review-Tribune's invitation to take everyone in East Liverpool who had attained the age of 65 or over free to the first afternoons showing of the entertaining drama builded around the life of the great emancipator.

Remember Lincoln automobiles have been offered through the courtesy of the Liverpool Motor Company, local Lincoln and Ford sales organization, to all aged residents who are physically unable to attend The Review-Tribune party otherwise.

We spend six dollars on fire protection and one dollar for health protection. All of which goes to prove that we place a higher value on our houses than we do on our health.

WIT AND HUMOR FROM JAPAN

If you wish to learn the highest truth you must begin with the alphabet.

The path of duty lies in what is near at hand; and men seek for it in what is remote.

This column (Number three of a series) is devoted today to proverbs from the Japanese.

Pinch yourself and know how others feel.

Though you lock the door ever so securely trouble will find a way in.

The second word makes the fray.

In the house where the samisen is played all day long there will be little rice in the larder.

He who hunts two hares leaves one and loses the other.

He who buys what he needs not, sells what he needs.

The mile is longest to him who is tired.

If every day was a sunny day who would not wish for rain.

It is difficult to be strong and not be rash.

Those who travel on horseback know nothing of the toil of those who travel on foot.

Never trust a woman even if she has borne you seven children.

The acolyte at the gate reads scriptures he has never learned.

Love does not recognize the difference between peasant and mikado.

Brothers quarrel like thieves inside a house, but outside their swords leap out in each other's defense.

The reason why parents love the younger children best is because they have now so little hope that the elder will do well.

Going down hill no one is old.

Where profit is, loss is hidden near by.

Old Register Has Famous Names.

In the attic of an old house there was found recently a register formtearly used at Hotel Monroe, Sweetwater, Tenn., that contained a group of famous names(showing among others who had stopped there: President U. S. Grant, who besides stopping there, had ordered 'I quart and 12 cigers;" John Robinson, former circus "king;" Sitting Bull and Gray Horse, famous Indian Chiefs, and General Tom Thumb, the celebrated dwarf.

Device Saves $60,000,000.

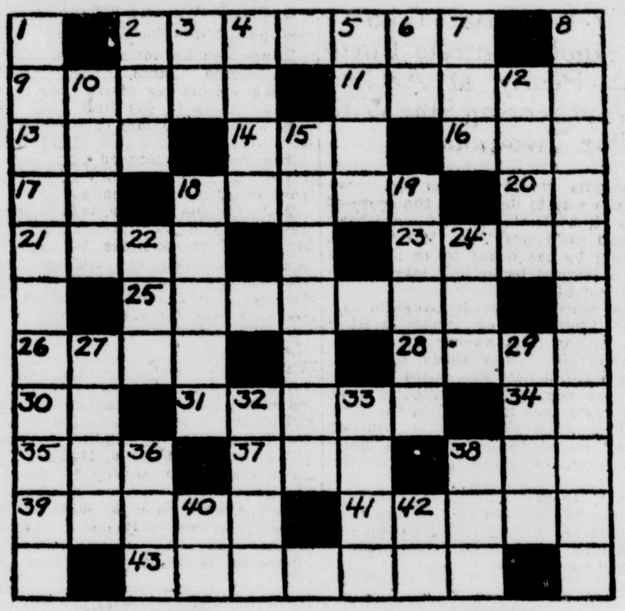

In the last 10 years auto buyers have been saved $60,000,000 by a car-loading device invented by E. S. Evans of Detroit. Mr. Evans was formerly a librarian of Richmond, Va., and his invention saves about $15 per auto in time, labor and lumber originally expended in loading and blocking an auto in a freight car.

CLARK B. FIRESTONE, FORMER LISBON RESIDENT, AUTHOR OF ANOTHER BOOK

Clark B. Firestone, former resident of Lisbon, now an editorial writer for the Cincinnati Times-Star, is author of a new book, "The Coasts of Illusion,' which literary critics have termed a "classic."

The book according to the preface, "gives a view of the earth and its inhabitants as seen through the haze of distance whether of space or time." The writer gives in compact form information that has historical importance as is summarizes the results of numerous adventures, many travels and a myriad of incursions and excursions into places remote from civilized centers.

Firestone was formerly connected with the Firestone Bank at Lisbon, which is now in charge of his brother. He has been engaged in newspaper work for many years, but during the war resided in Lisbon where he took an active part in Liberty loan and other campaigns.

In addition to his editorial work on the Cincinnati Times-Star, Firestone is a dramatic critic. He was on the editorial staff of several New York newspapers before he became affiliated with the Cincinnati paper.

"The Coast of Illusion," one critic says, "is a book of utter fascination that must remain a classic in its own field for many years to come." Phil A. Kinsley, of the Philadelphia record, says the book "attests not only his industry but his great skill as a writer and the volume contributes a great deal to the world's entertainment and knowledge.

Last Day for Free Tickets for Film, "Abraham Lincoln"

Today is the last day East Liverpool residents will be able to obtain a free ticket to the Monday afternoon's showing of the photoplay, "Abraham Lincoln," at The American Theater as guests of the Review Tribune.

The turn-out has been very good in response to The Review-Tribune's invitation to take everyone in East Liverpool who had attained the age of 65 or over free to the first afternoons showing of the entertaining drama builded around the life of the great emancipator.

Remember Lincoln automobiles have been offered through the courtesy of the Liverpool Motor Company, local Lincoln and Ford sales organization, to all aged residents who are physically unable to attend The Review-Tribune party otherwise.

We spend six dollars on fire protection and one dollar for health protection. All of which goes to prove that we place a higher value on our houses than we do on our health.

Floating Island Seldom Still

In Henry's Lake, in Idaho, is an island that travels. This floating piece of land is about 300 feet wide and it has for its base a mass of roots that supports large trees and a dense underbrush. The earth is solid enough to support a house. The wind blows the island so readily that it seldom remains in one place more than 24 hours.

Advice For Mothers
You Cannot Afford to Overlook One Word of This

Cambridge, Ohio—"When my baby was six months old I had gone down in health with inward weakness so that I could not get around to do my housework or care for my baby. I was just about 'down and out' when I started to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. The first bottle proved to me that I was taking the right medicine and six bottles helped me to get around to do my work as easily as before my illness. Favorite Prescription really did do wonders for me and I am glad to recommend it at every opportunity."—Mrs. M. E. Stephenson, 4171 Long St.

Mrs. M. E. Stephenson

You Cannot Afford to Overlook One Word of This

Cambridge, Ohio—"When my baby was six months old I had gone down in health with inward weakness so that I could not get around to do my housework or care for my baby. I was just about 'down and out' when I started to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. The first bottle proved to me that I was taking the right medicine and six bottles helped me to get around to do my work as easily as before my illness. Favorite Prescription really did do wonders for me and I am glad to recommend it at every opportunity."—Mrs. M. E. Stephenson, 4171 Long St.

Obtain Dr. Pierce's Prescription now, in liquid or tablets, from your druggist or send 10c for trial pkg. of tablets to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y., or write for free medical advice.
